HOMES ADDITION FOR MILL'S FOLK. WILLAMETTE PULP & PAPER MILLS TAKES BIG STEP FOR EMPLOYEES.

ARTISTIC COTTAGES TO BE BUILT. Fifty-seven Acres of Land Overlooking River to be Turned into Model Suburb for Benefit of Workers.

Fifty-seven acres of prettily situated land, overlooking the river and sloping so that the best of drainage may be obtained, has been platted as "Willamette Heights" by the Willamette Pulp & Paper Mills.

The acreage has been divided into 261 tracts of residence sites also. Most of the smaller tracts are a little larger than the average city lot.

Sixteen different sets of plans, each set providing for a home that is distinctive and up-to-date, have been prepared by an architect for the company, and employees will be given a choice of these plans.

The land itself will be sold to employees at cost, and the houses will be erected and actual construction costs. No interest will be charged, and while employees are paying for the property there will be no taxes assessed against it.

COUNCIL REFUSES SPECIAL LICENSE

BALOONS ONCE CLOSED MUST REMAIN SHUT, IS OPINION OF CITY FATHERS

TOOZE RATHER GIVEN TO ARGUMENT

Militant Councilman Declares "Official" Saw Proprietor Make No Protest When Minors Were Served Liquor

The city council Monday afternoon at a special meeting lasting nearly two hours, refused to issue special liquor licenses to J. M. Klomson and Peter Kern, to whom the council refused to issue new licenses the first of the present month, because they had violated the liquor laws.

Mr. Klomson and O. D. Ely, who represented Peter Kern asked that the council give them special permits, extending 60 days, or until July 1, so that they might sell the liquor which they have in stock.

Mr. Klomson said that the city was forcing him into great loss, and he thought it nothing more than confiscation of his property. He said that if the council did not give him a license, he was either going to become a preacher or a professor, as he believed these occupations a little more secure, at least in Oregon City.

In answer to Mr. Ely, who challenged anybody to say a word that would cast reflection upon Mr. Kern, Councilman F. J. Tooze declared that Mr. Kern had seen liquor served to minors in a certain saloon in town, and had made no protest at it.

Mr. Tooze said he didn't care to say, whereupon Mr. Ely insisted that he ought to be told. A moment later he added: "Will you, Mr. Tooze, then say that liquor was sold to minors with Mr. Kern's knowledge, and without his protest?"

"No," said Mr. Tooze, and subsided. After some further bickering between Mr. Tooze, the matter was dropped.

Councilman John Albright believed that the men should be allowed to take their present stocks, and did not believe the council should try to put the town dry. He said if the people had wanted the town dry, they would have voted it so. He added: "I believe the property owners should have the greatest weight in such affairs as this, as they are the ones who have to pay the taxes for the upkeep of the city. I do not care what Tom, Dick or Harry have to say about this matter, when they do not own a cent's worth of property in the city and pay no taxes."

THIEF ALL ALONE

MASON WARNOCK RECAPTURES HIS STOLEN HORSE—FORCES MARAUDER TO SURRENDER

PRISONER IS COWED BY OLD RIFLE

Charles Maher Bound Over After Spectacular Capture By Man Well Past Three Score Years and Ten

Though well past his three score years and ten, Mason Warnock, a Springfield pioneer still in the prime of his energy, Friday arrested a horse thief and brought him to justice.

An old smooth bore rifle figured in the arrest, and sufficed to bring the marauder of the Warnock stables to time without much parley.

Five o'clock Friday morning Mr. Warnock arose to do his chores, as has been his custom since he first settled on the Springfield, nearly fifty years ago.

On going to the barn he discovered that one of his best horses was missing, as was his bridle and saddle. The horse had been freshly shod but a day or two before, and Mr. Warnock had little difficulty in following its tracks and noting the general direction in which the animal had gone.

Returning to his house he procured an old smooth bore rifle with which he has brought down much game, and he proceeded to cut a trail that cutting across fields took a trail that he knew would intercept the roadway along which his steed had been taken.

Reaching this highway after an hour's walk, he again discovered the tracks, and following them a short way, noted that they turned down a blind side road. Knowing there was no other outlet at the end of this by-path, Mr. Warnock sat down by the roadside and waited developments.

In a few minutes he saw his horse coming back towards the main road, ridden by a stranger. Waiting until the rider was within a few feet of him, Mr. Warnock threw up his rifle, and covered the man on horseback, ordering him to throw up his hands.

The rider obeyed instantly, though he protested at being "held up" in such a way. Mr. Warnock paid no heed to his protestations, but bade the man get down and stand beside the horse. When he had done this, still keeping the steed covered, Mr. Warnock mounted the steed and ordered his quarry to walk ahead of him.

At the point of the rifle, Mr. Warnock marched his man several miles, until he reached the settlement at Springfield, where he dismounted, and continuing to keep the muzzle of his rifle on his prisoner, telephoned Oregon City for an officer.

A deputy constable was sent out after the horse thief, and the prisoner was brought in to Justice Slevier's court. There he gave his name as Charles Maher, and after a brief hearing was bound over to the grand jury.

Mr. Warnock is well known in the Springfield country and in Oregon City, and is regarded as a fearless and daring man. Friends of his say that it would have made no difference to him if all his horses had been stolen, and declare that if such had been the case he would, with equal ease and firmness, have rounded up the entire gang of thieves. He is known as an expert shot, and his rifle is said to be one of the truest guns in Clackamas county.

Liberty Bell's Last Peal. On the morning of June 8, 1835, the Liberty bell, which for a century had been Philadelphia's greatest instrument for showing joy or grief, was being tolled for Chief Justice John Marshall.

On that occasion it was badly cracked. But broken as it was, the bell was afterward rung on great occasions, although the tones were but sorry reminders of the once powerful sound. So it happened that on Washington's birthday, 1847, the old bell was once again tolled in joy.

WOMAN'S LLS DISAPPEARED

Like Magic after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

North Bangor, N. Y.—"As I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with great benefit I feel it my duty to write and tell you about it. I was ailing from female weakness and had headache and backache nearly all the time. I was later every month than I should have been and so sick that I had to go to bed."

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and these troubles have disappeared like magic. I have recommended the Compound to many women who have used it successfully."—Mrs. JAMES J. STACY, R.F.D. No. 3, North Bangor, N. Y.

Another Made Well. Ann Arbor, Mich.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for me. For years I suffered terribly with hemorrhoids and had pains so intense that sometimes I would faint away. I had female weakness so bad that I had to doctor all the time and never found relief until I took your remedies to please my husband. I recommend your wonderful medicine to all sufferers as I think it is a blessing for all women."—Mrs. L. E. WYCKOFF, 112 S. Ashley St., Ann Arbor, Mich.

There need be no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from the roots and herbs of our fields, to remedy woman's diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical. Why don't you try it?

ONLY "STAGE-COACH" AUTOMOBILE. Massachusetts Textile Mill Owner Visits County Seat to Find "Local Color," But Discovers Modern Progress.

Ralston B. Ames, of Newburyport, Massachusetts, was happily disappointed in Oregon City when he dropped off the train Thursday morning and found a modern and enterprising community where he had expected to discover a relic of pioneer days, replete with stage coaches, wooden shacks, uncouth personages and Indians. Not that Mr. Ames is a "Pullman car window tourist," in any sense of the word, for such is not the case. Instead he is a man of much education and considerable experience, but "the movies" led him astray in regard to Oregon City.

Mr. Ames is interested in many things, including fisheries and textile mills. He is en route on a "swing around the circle" from Boston back to Boston, by way of New Orleans, the Southwest, San Francisco, Portland, the Northwest and Canada, and is traveling leisurely, and seeing the country as he goes. One night recently in San Francisco, he stepped into a moving picture theatre to while away a few minutes before his dinner hour, and there saw a photograph entitled, "At the End of the Oregon Trail." The scene of the photograph was supposed to be set in Oregon City. Mr. Ames says, and started in with the arrival of a stage with the Eastern mails and a party of Indians who had "braved the rapids of the Willamette to trade skins and fish with the settlers."

"The pictures I saw were so realistic," said Mr. Ames, in accounting for his happy disappointment, "that it never occurred to me that they were probably made in California or on a Montana ranch, where some film company maintains a typical pioneer settlement for picture purposes. The settlement shown on the screen seemed to be just on the verge of quitting its rough and uncouth state for inter-mediate civilization, and later on, when I saw by the railroad timetable that stage collections could be made at Oregon City for various points, I thought that probably the film representation was reasonably accurate."

"You can imagine my amusement when they told me in Salem yesterday that I could get an interurban car from Oregon City into Portland, and that I would find pier and woolen mills here that would well repay me for a visit. So impressed had I been with those moving pictures at San Francisco that I thought my Salem acquaintances were joking with me; but when I got off the train I found that the joke was on me.

"You certainly have an enterprising city here, and one that bids fair to develop greatly in the next few years. I was surprised when I was told the amount of municipal improvement work that your council has undertaken, and I want to say that it indicates the typical Western spirit of progress, which I am meeting everywhere on your city, and when I get back home I am going to show them to my friends, and then tell them how I was looking for stage coaches and Indians in such surroundings. They will enjoy hearing of my mistake, and will laugh when I tell them that the only 'stage' I could see on your paved streets was an automobile of modern make and power."

After visiting the mills in the city, and taking a walk through the business and residence sections, Mr. Ames continued his journey by interurban to Portland. Just before boarding the car he remarked regretfully that he would liked to have seen at least one Indian.

Look to Your Plumbing. You know what happens in a house in which the plumbing is in poor condition—everybody in the house is liable to contract typhoid or some other fever. The digestive organs perform the same functions in the human body as the plumbing does for the house, and they should be kept in first class condition all the time. If you have any trouble with your digestion take Chamberlain's Tablets and you are certain to get quick relief. For sale by all druggists.
