MACKSBURG.

Hop-picking began in earnest on the morning of Monday, Sept. 1st. With the exception of a few who must remain at home to tend to the babies and the stock, every one who is not busy in the harvesting or threshing is at work in the hop yards.

The fine weather, so bright and yet, so cool as to make all out of door work a delight, gave place—on Tuesday afternoon—to a rain that stopped the pickers; but this—Wednesday morning—the clouds are scattering and all are indulging the hope of a bright afternoon and a return to the work.

The crop is fine, and should be favorable, we may confidently expect that the close of the season may bring abundant satisfaction to growers and pickers alike.

The fall blackberries are ripening and will be in their prime at the end of the hop season. The grow in such abundance that, highly as they are prized, and despite the almost incredible quantities that are preserved for winter use, many must go to waste.

The mind goes back to the early days of Oregon, in observing this spontaneous provision of luscious fruit. One thinks of the delight it must have afforded those weary travelers, worn out by their months wagon journey, their provisions reduced to the barest necessities, to find this charming supply of fruit ready for them, as it must have been for those who came in early June and the late October. Even those who came in the winter must have been cheered by the promise of summer fruit to be seen in the graceful, luxuriant vines climbing over every object to which they could cling.

The crop of oats is turning out most satisfactorily. George Scramlin's yielded 93 bushels to the acre, and would everyone said, have run 100 bushels but for the quantity that fell to the ground of its own weight. Geo. Herbert, however, has exceeded this by his crop growing 116 bushels to the acre. This phenomenal yield is due to the careful cultivation Mr. Herbert bestowed upon his soil.

In this field last year he raised a crop of clover and plowed it under this spring, rendering the ground so fertile that his crop of oats repaid him for the labor and cost.

The rain of last Wednesday stopped the threshing. The time, however, was not lost, at least with the Walsh-Heppler outfit. Their machine gave out just at that time. The rainy day was spent in procuring and setting up a new machine, so that when the storm was over they were in the best of shape to resume work.

Frank Hilton and Joseph Heppler returned on Monday from their mountain trip.

Mr. Roberts' house took fire from a burning chimney on Tuesday morning. The flames were extinguished by the nearest neighbors before the arrival of further help which speedily came in the whole force of workmen from Mr. Heizer's hop yard.

The buckberry pickers have returned from the mountains, reporting a very light crop.

Caught a Bad Cold.

"Last winter my son caught a very bad cold and the way he coughed was something dreadful," writes Mrs. Sarah E. Duncan, of Tipton, Iowa. "We thought sure he was going into consumption. We bought just one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that one bottle stopped his cough and cured his cold completely." For sale by all dealers.

STAFFORD.

After a period of fine weather, so that nearly all of Stafford and vicinity have their threshing done and grain harvested it began to rain on Tuesday, to the discomfort of the numerous hop pickers, and the dismay of those owning yards which were in prime condition for picking, and work had commenced in nearly all the fields which had been discontinued. Half an inch of rain fell before sundown, which will be of immense benefit to the potato crop, bringing to mind again the old saying, "What is one man's meat is another man's poison."
