I have also noticed that the farmers who take the matters as lusuits are erally those who get the biggest ook on the countles poor fund, and

It is my belief that the city folks good faith and would do all, provided they could assist us poor devils who have to plod through mother earth to get to town in the winter months of the year. To prove hat good faith I would state that in the post it has been my pleasure to that whenever a school house is wilt, a sidewalk is constructed, a disict fair is to be provided for, or our sunty's advertising is done, the poor pant along the Main and Seventh streets of Oregon City is sucked for coin. I am advised, and I guess it is rue, that all of the advertising done $25 down by the Oregon City mer-chants. May I ask. Who is getting the direct benefits? We farmers, of When I located here I paid $40 per acre for my land. A week ago I was offered by an Easterner $150 per acre. I have hopes for Clackamas onty and I am going to stay with this place, for I know I cannot dupli-

Now for the good roads probles When I moved on this place the county court informed me that "next year" the road would be completed past my place. In the middle of the year the road was completed to my northern neighbor's place and he, being an important factor in the district, used his births reported to the health officer influence to stop road work, for he from the various physicians and other feared that his place would not be sources of information in the county. I have made it a point to consult with several road supervisors who have been engaged in road improvements in Clackamas County for a number of years, and without an exception they have informed me that after a super-visor has had two or three years' experience in road improvements, they can accomplish twenty-five or thirty per cent more than they could the first year, as they have learned how to take advantage of certain particular kind of work that they have never had any prior experience in, and that is the reason why newly appointed inexperienced supervisors do not gut the best results from the money expended.

Any reasonable man could not ex any training along that line, and get the best results while he is inexperienced in road construction, and as the many times a greater mistake from supervisors of Clackamas County are not retained any great length of time, fully fifty per cent of the experienced men are discarded each year and inexperienced men are appointed in
