person in Marion County. It is a statement that Marion County is without progress, that its farmers are content to be imprisoned by mud each winter and by dust each summer; it is the same old song, the song that every pessimist hoots at every enthusiastic and progressive optimist, the song which sings, "It was good enough for my father and it's good enough for me." Marion County farmers are content to haul their crops through the mud, hub deep, to the county seat. They are content to let their distance to their markets be increased twofold, or threefold by heavy roads; they are backward and slow-they are all of this if the statement of Commissioner Beckwith is true.

He says in part, "Automobile owners will take the sole possession of this Pacific Highway, in the event it is built, and, unless the farmer with a place two or three miles to one side can build his own feeder, he can simply stand by and watch the autos pass." Firm in the belief that the money derived from the sale of the bonds will be used for the Pacific Highway alone, using the weakest of all the flimsy arguments against the bond issue, this commissioner holds a position in the county, a place of trust and responsibility, and is supposed to know both sides of every issue and yet advanced such a statement as this.

Here is a man, holding one of the most trustworthy positions in all his needless legislation," was the statecounty, a man who is supposed to keep in touch with every movement, a gentleman who, with the thoroughness of a student, can test every public question so that he can help run the county with ease and confidence, advancing the idea that with the $850,000 bond issue, Marion county can only repair the Pacific Highway. With that sum, Marion County can build a network of highways, a system that would be the pride of the county, roads that would bring the cities closer to the farmers and the farmers closer to rhe cities; and the commissioner opposed the plan because he has never learned that with $850,000 more than 15 or 20 miles of good roads could be built.

He opposes the plan because with the bond issue only a part of the roads in his county could be rebuilt. He believes in the doctrine that if every mile of the roads cannot be pavement, let all be mud. He is one who says, that if Farmer Smith cannot drive all the way to town on a hard-surfaced highway let him ooze through in the mud all the way,

It is a waste of time to explain such an argument. When a county plans to build good roads, it cannot pave all its roads the first year or the first ten years. The natural thing to do is to pave the most important roads. those which will do the most people the most good and such is the plan of the bond issue.

SULLIVAN CUMES It is just as well, perhaps. The orderly might have perpetrated an historic saying, had he thought in time. But other things were on his mind. And, at least, let us get the incident recorded correctly before tradition makes it unchangeable.

ELIEVING THAT it would help the farmers, a plan has originated B in Marion County of collecting taxes in the fall instead of the spring as at present.

The argument advanced is that the fall is the logical time to get money from the farmers. It is then that the crops have just been sold and as a rule SAVING IN REPAIRS A HEAVY ITEM N AN ARTICLE on the front page of the Capital Journal of Salem. the majority of ranchers are well supplied with ready cash. Now there is nothing misleading in the article nor the table. The whole is based on facts and past history and the only assumption in any part of same is that of the probable, future as sessable property valuation in this county. Those valuations are increas ed regularly each year in an amount leas than the average for the past four years and, proportionately speaking, at only one-half of what the increase has been for the past ten years.
