BETTER FARMHOUSES.

Department of Agriculture Makes a Plea For Economical Buildings. The importance to the farmer of having an economical farmhouse has been emphasized by the farm architect of the department of agriculture, who states that the mental and physical fitness of the laborers both within the house and in the fields is vitally affected by the building that affords the family shelter. The average American farmhouse has falled to share in the improvements that are every day being made in agricultural conditions and, according to the architect, is a rebuke to our boasted civilization. Relatively, he says, the housewife of a century ago, with her fireplace cooking and log cabin, was better provided for than is the housewife today.

The most important building on a farm is the home. The health, comfort and happiness of the family are dependent upon its construction and equipment, and unless these matters are looked after the sanitary dairy barn and the economically constructed buildings for stock are of little value. Happiness and contentment in the family are as essential to efficient service as improved tools and outbuildings.

Although the housewife spends, in many cases, a lifetime in her "workshop," the kitchen and the family rooms, she is not, as a rule, capable of planning a house in the highest degree serviceable and comfortable without assistance. Her help, however, is essential to the farm architect, as the result of his plans most vitally concerns

In 1910 a western farm paper, at the suggestion of the department of agriculture, conducted a competition for farmhouse plans. About 660 plans of farmhouses were submitted, not one of which was fully satisfactory. The larger number insisted on some particular pet notion and emphasized a single feature to the neglect of other important ones. The men and women who familiarize themselves with the work to be done and then apply themselves to the single task of devising means are the ones who, with the co-operation of the farmers and their wives, can best handle the farmhouse problem.

HELPS TO AGRICULTURE.

Many Animals and Birds Are Good Friends of the Farmer.

Predaceous animals and birds have an important function to perform in their capacity as natural enemies to crop destroying insects and pests, according to the biological survey of the department of agriculture. The annual damage to crops by insect and mammal pests in the United States. now amounts to many millions of dollars, which is the result largely of the encroachment of new insect enemies and rodent pests and the destruction by man of the natural enemies of these crop destroying pests.

If mendow mice were always present the red tailed hawk would rarely touch other food. It is when their normal food is scarce that predatory birds and animals are from necessity forced to take what they can find and thus become trespassers on man's property.

The coyote and great horned owl in rabbit infested regions and in vineyards, orchards, meadows or gardens overrun by field mice are among the best friends of man, but on the other hand in thickly settled regions comparatively free from rabbits and mice both have to be summarily dealt with, as does the covote in sections where sheep raising is an important indus-

The mink is indefatigable in its search for meadow mice and other marsh loving rodents. The weasel, while individually it has acquired the poultry habit, is one of nature's most efficient checks upon the bordes of meadow mice and other rodent crop destroyers. The skunk renders important service by destroying immense numbers of mice, white grubs, grasshoppers, crickets, cutworms, hornets, wasps and other noxious forms. The badger is valuable in destroying ground squirrels, prairie dogs, gophers and other burrowing animals, and farmers should bear in mind that hawks and owls feed largely on noxious rodents and the larger insects, such as grasshoppers, crickets and May beetles. There are two kinds of hawks that should be kept in checknamely, the sharp skinned and Cooper variety, which feed almost entirely on wild birds and poultry.

SACRAMENTO, April 4 .- Thirteen Folsom prison attempted to escape here late today by overpowering the guards in the corridor of the building Three were shot and instantly killed one, Norman C. Hare, died tonight of bullet wolunds, and a fifth convict is expected to die.

The men who figured in the at tempted break were considered the most vicious and desperate in the prison. Not a guard was wounded and none of the men gained the outside of the building. Those who were not shot dodged back in their cell doors and begged for mercy.

The men plotted the break in their cells Thursday night. It was overheard by the guards, and the leaders were warned not to attempt to escape Warden J. J. Smith regarding the average American farmhouse is that it must be inexpensive. The average annual net income of a farmer today after deducting 5 per cent interest on his investment is less than $400. This does not mean that the houses may not be attractive. They may, if intelligently planned with the help of vines, shrubs and trees, become the prettiest spots in the landscape, and more beautiful and inexpensive than the crowded city houses.

After economy in the construction of the building and in the house work has been attained, attention will be given to developing beauty. Simplicity in line and good proportions are meant by the use of this word beauty, and not so called applied "ornaments." This simplicity is entirely in keeping with a general plan of economy.

Economy, however, is not a synonym for cheapness. Double strength glass may even be more economical in a tenant house than single strength, notwithstanding its greater first cost. A kitchen sink may be a paying investment, although it excludes a bay window, or a fireplace, which has been the pet notion of the housewife. Screened in kitchen porches, sleeping porches, double or triple windows and kitchen conveniences are fine economical features which even the smallest house plans may well consider

ORCHARD OCCASIONALS.

An Osage range hedge is an ideal breeding place for San Jose scale. Pears are treated in much the same manner as apples.

Judicious pruning is one of the secrets in growing good grapes.

Pears are adapted to a clay soil, peaches to a sandy soil, while apples do best on a light loamy soll.

If you have a poor seedling pear or apple tree it may be entirely made over by top grafting.

The young trees should be banked with earth, which will keep water from settling about them.

An orchard will live longer, bear better and be more profitable by being well cultivated and enriched.

Keep the orchard land in good tilth. The trees can be set as soon as the frost leaves the ground.
