FORUM OF THE PEOPLE BEAVERS WIN LOOSE GAME; SCORE 17 TO 5

Memorial Day. Editor Enterprise: Yesterday, everywhere throughout the nation, the annual day was observed with more or less appropriate exercises in honor of our patriot dead who gave their lives fighting for what they believed was right.

Portland, Ore., June 2.—One of the most decisive games of the season in the Pacific Coast league was won this afternoon by the Portland Beavers from the Reds in the score of 17 to 5.

The contest started off close and it was the third inning before the Beavers made their first run, but in the fourth set the Beavers scored six runs and the Reds nailed five in the fifth set.

For the opening game between the Senators and Beavers this afternoon, Gill, a recruit pitcher whom Manager Wolverton picked up recently at Woodland, Cal., was the choice to oppose Rieger.

A half a minute of vaudeville furnished diversion for the unusually large week day crowd of spectators that was on hand.

Today's batting order: Sacramento—Young, ss; Mohler, 2b; Coy, rf; Van Buren, cf; Tennant, 1b; Moran, cf; Hallinan, 3b; Hannah, c; Gill, p.

Portland—Hancock, ss; Rodgers, 2b; Doane, rf; Derrick, 1b; Ryan, cf; Lober, lf; Kores, 3b; Yaniz, c; Rieger, p.

SEVERAL OF THE PERPLEXING PROBLEMS which now confront the American people relative to the vital question of life, such as the high cost of living and the elimination of the middlemen, can be grouped under one head, the farm problem.

This big question is rapidly becoming one of the most complicated and at the same time one of the most important to the development and the growth of the nation. The metropolitan press, the country press, and the farm press are full of it. Lectures are given on it from the platform, preachers preach it from the pulpit but the consumer continues to cry out against the high cost of living and the producer against the prices he obtains in market.

And in the meantime, experts are declaring that the soil fertility is decreasing, that the production of meat is decreasing but at the same time the population of the nation is growing at a great pace. Various advice for the cure of these conditions is plentiful. One expert would have the farmer fertilize his land and raise larger crops; another laments the small amount of sheep and cattle raised on the average farm; another declares that the producer does not use brains with his business, while others have still more wisdom which they offer to the farmer.

Whatever the view taken by the expert, all seem to agree on one thing—the necessity of keeping the farmer on the farm. It is evident that no amount of fertilizer will produce big crops without the guiding hand of the farmer. The question is not only how to keep the farmer on the farm but also how to make the farm so attractive that his boys and girls will stay on the farm.

And here, too, there have been dozens of answers. In Indiana the plan of building a club house in the county seat is being tried out. The building is large and comfortable and every convenience to make the place seem home-like has been installed. The building is the first of its kind in the middle west. The Indianapolis Star says:

"By administering to the physical comfort of the farming community of Jackson county, the club house will lead to friendly and more intimate relations between the county seat and its rural neighbors and the evolution in many communities." The Star may be right but how is the farmer going to reconcile himself to the lack of comforts of home with such a place in the town.

The Farm and Fireside, a well known publication devoted to the interests of the farmer, believes that it has found the true solution of the problem. This paper would have the children of a community be taught in such a way that the fascination of the farm life would be brought out strongly while the conditions in the city would either be omitted or touched on lightly. In describing the plan, the Farm and Fireside describes the effect on the pupil:

"What had made the change? Just this: the teachers had been given more practical work to do in the schools. They had been giving the teaching a farm slant. They had been working in the schools on farm matters, and the girls had been studying cooking, sewing, housekeeping and the care of the house and children. And they had forgotten about leaving the farm. They had been doing pleasant, interesting, practical work, and they were happy. They had come to see that there is just as fascinating work, just as intellectual work, just as big work in the country as any of them could expect to get in the city—and much higher work than most of them could expect."

Both of these suggestions probably would have an important bearing on the solution of the farm problem but it will take more than one remedy to correct the present condition. The education of the children, the development of the social side of farm life, and other plans would all work toward the same end but it will take several of them to keep the farmer and his children on the farm.

BILL IS BEING DRAFTED for the initiative in the alleged interest of Sabbath keeping, which will seriously cut down the earnings of streetcar and railroad employes, and add enormously to the expense of hotels, restaurants and all business that must be operated seven days in the week.

The bill is in charge of a committee of the federal council of churches and the federation of labor, and the text of the bill is as follows: Section 1. It is declared to be the public policy of the state of Oregon that each and every person of either sex employed for wages as hereinafter specified, shall be allowed a period of rest of at least one day of 24 consecutive hours, in each and every calendar week, to permit said person to improve his or her, physical, mental and moral condition, to the end that the general welfare may be promoted and the general health, intelligence, uprightness and usefulness of citizens increased.

Section 2. Every employer of persons of either sex for wages, whether such employer be an individual, partnership or corporation, engaged in carrying on in this state manufacturing, mercantile, or public utility business, or any other business conducted for profit shall allow each person, except those exempted in section 3 hereof, employed in such manufacturing, mercantile, or public utility business, or any other business conducted for profit, at least one day consisting of 24 consecutive hours of rest in each and every calendar week.

Section 3. This act shall not apply to janitors, watchmen, or employes whose duties include no work in excess of two consecutive hours of labor on the day allotted for their rest period. The proposed bill goes on to state that the employer shall keep a time book, with the names of every employe in it and the hours worked, for the inspection of the labor commissioner, and provides a penalty for the violation of the act.

Businesslike. The Beloved One—You object to Horace because he's not businesslike. Stern Parent—Certainly; he's only after you for your money. Beloved One—Well, pa, doesn't that prove he's businesslike?

Tennyson and Shakespeare. Tennyson loved Shakespeare. The last thing the dying author did was to call for a copy of Shakespeare and read "Cymbeline." "I looked at the book at midnight," wrote his son "when I was sitting by him lying dead, and found he had opened on one of the passages which he called the tenderest in Shakespeare. We could not part with this volume, but buried a Shakespeare with him. We had the book inclosed in a metal box and laid by his side."

Heart to Heart Talks By CHARLES N. LURIE

LISTEN TO KAISER WILHELM. One of the mightiest kings of the earth is Emperor William of Germany. Anything he says or does gets into print. The world is interested in knowing what persons in exalted positions like his talk about and how they act.

"I prefer not to be praised by anybody when I simply act according to my conscience and carry out the commands which I should."

"The saying which has been engraved for the Kaiser and he has had several copies of it framed and hung, one above the writing desk in his private study in the palace at Berlin, another in the royal yacht and others in his various shooting boxes."

"I have often wondered how it should come to pass that every man loving himself best should more regard other men's opinions concerning himself than his own, for if any god or grave master standing by should command any of us to think nothing by himself but what he should presently speak out no man were able to endure it, though but for one day."

Are little things important? Ask the captain who brought his schooner from Peru, not as the owners had intended, to Charleston, S. C., but to Charleston, Mass. He will give you his opinion of the shipping clerk who spelled the name of the city of his destination with a "w" that did not belong there.—Youth's Companion.

"What profession do you think my boy Joe had better adopt?" asked Mrs. Brown. "I dunno," answered her husband. "Joe is rather handicapped by circumstances. The only profession he's naturally adapted to is that of a capitalist, and I don't quite see where he's goin' to get the money."
