MATTY GOT THE LETTER.

It Bore No Name, but Mail Clerks Were Baseball Fans.

A baseball fan in Chicago, G. Irwin by name, thought he would "stump" the postoffice department. He scribbled a note to a man whom he always calls by his first name, though this man never heard of him in all his life. placed the note inside a long envelope and pasted a big black figure "C." four inches long, cut from an evening paper headline, on the envelope, says the Baseball Magazine.

Placing a two cent stamp on the en velope, Irwin dropped the letter into nates. An hour later the long envelope, with the big black "6" as its only address, fell under the eye of a postal clerk sorting mail.

"That's easy," grinned the clerk. Nothing to it: the letter's for Matty. the 'Big Six' Get me? He's out in Los Angeles." And with a blue pencil he wrote on the envelope, "Try Los Angeles, Cal."

Nothing more. He had a sense of humor and did not spoil things right off the but by writing. "Mr. Christopher Mathewson, Los Angeles, Cal., In the shadow of the "G"

Straight to Los Angeles the letter came, and the first distributing clerk in the Los Angeles office knew at first glance that the big "f" meant nothing else in the world than "Big Six," and that the designated gentleman lived at 1337 West Forty-seventh street. But not a scratch did he write on the en velope. He "passed it up" to the carrier, and the carrier missed four blocks of his route to get that letter to Christy Mathewson as soon as possible.

NOT SPORT, SAY SOME

Though many sporting writers de clare that six day tocycle races are not sporting events, the recent race in York attracted tremendous crowds, and it is likely that the races In Kansas City, Chicago and Sau Prancisco will likewise attract much siten Interest was maintained in the event in New York by special prizes for sprinting on nearly every night. and these sprints resulted in previous records being lanken. tie sleep, as, riding in teams, they must be ready at all times to relieve a partner who may have found the going too hard. Bunks are prepared alongside the track, and the exhausted riders tumble into them with their clothes on for a brief pap when the opportunity offers. They are likely to be aroused at any moment to mount a wheel and be shoved on to the track to engage at once in a sprint that requires every bit of their energy.

Bobby Walthour, the old timer, was paired with Ralstead. They fell behind early in the race, and, though they made a game fight, were anable to catch up. Though they dld not share in the prize money, they were well paid for their work. Indeed, the prizes, amounting to only $4,450, were only a part of the money paid to riders who shared in at least $30,000. The expenses of the race, including rent of the Garden, amounted to $40,000, so the profits for the promoters were not large

Although the managers will not give accurate figures, it is learned that at least one rider, Goullet of the Australian team, pulled down $2,000 as a bonus. His great victory last year made him the big card of the race this time. had to be given a big guarantee before he would sign for the grind. His "salary" for the week amounted to at least $1,500 outside of what he and his team mate won in prize money. Egg and Verri, the Italians, divided about $2,800 in addition to a first class passage from Italy and return. Fog-ier, Moran, McNamara, Bobby Walthour and Eddle Root all received bonuses. In fact, every man in the race had to be guaranteed a certain amount for every day he remained in the race. That tells why some of those who were hopelessly ispped continued to ride. Up to two years ago one of the big items in the expense list of the big race was the care and feeding of the riders. Now the men must provide for their own keep and training before the race. But in lieu of this they demanded and received larger bonuses. "Six day bicycle events," said one of the managers, "are getting to be like baseball. The hired men are getting the biggest share of what comes in at the gate. Even though we do not make a big profit this year we have accomplished one thing that will count in the future. We barred the object tionable element-the gun men and gangsters."

BETTER THAN NEUTRALITY. . Everybody has seen the man who is willing to stand by and see two others inflamed by rage or drink batter each

"Let them fight. It's no affair of mine," he says.

He forgets or ignores the fact that the law and public duty make each of us a pence officer, bound not only to keep the peace ourselves, but to aid in maintaining it among others. Of course

Concerning the two combatants the indifferent fellow is merely a neutral His interference in the affair might be construed as favoring one side or the other, especially if one of the fighters was gaining the upper hand. But in reality intervention is enjoined by the facts that the fighters may do each other serious and lasting injury and that the spectacle of their pounding each other is brutal and demoralizing. In the European war-It has been reported that President Wilson has offered the services of the United States to settle the differences between the two gigantic groups of warring powers. The case is not, of course, precisely similar to that of a man who interferes to stop a fight on the public highway between two men. In that case the intervener, possessing a cool head and superior strength by reason of his coolness, may enforce his counsels of reason. The United States could not use its armed power to impose peace on Europe, for that course of action would add to the fuel of war. But-We can act the merciful part by bringing aid to the victims of the war. In number they will be uncountable. In need their demands will surpass any call ever made on us by fire or flood or earthquake or volcanic eruption or former war.

Henor to Spaini That little country, small and poor in comparison to the United States, has set us a noble example. "Senor Dato, the premier of Spain." says a recent dispatch. "has announced that should the belligerent countries arrive at any agreement with regard to the wounded and Spain be asked to receive them Spain will undertake this humanitarian duty because charity knows no frontier. The municipality of San Sebastian has agreed to take a considerable number of orphans of the belligerent countries and is also contributing substantial sums to the Red Cross or anizations of belligerents."
