barrassed.

you are ready."

grave, almost haggard.

a statement to make."

PLANS FOR LARGE ADDITION TO HIGH SCHOOLAREMADE

SCHOOL BOARD AUTHORIZES ARCHITECT TO PREPARE ES-TIMATES AND PLANS.

APPROVAL OF VOTERS NECESSARY TO SECURE FUNDS FOR BUILDING

New State Law Will Bring Hundred More Students From Country

to Oregon City School

Believe Directors.

The construction of a six-room extension to the high school building and the enlargement of the auditorium to increase the seating capacity by more than 60 per cent is planned by the board of education, which discussed the various phases of the situation at a special meeting Thursday night. The enactment by the last legislature of a law providing that county courts must make a general levy to care for the tuition of pupils residing in districts where there are no high schools is expected to result in a largely increased attendance at the Oregon City high school next September.

There are about 100 tuition students attending school here at the present time, and their tuition is paid out of the pockets of their own parents, but ed in the most comfortable easyunder the law the tuition must be paid by a general tax levy upon all his host's best clgars, watching with property in the county, with the exception of property located in districts Laura and Lenora were seated at the having high schools. The amount of the tuition is based upon the actual cost of educating the students which will be more than double the present rate charged.

C. W. Vonderahe has been employed by the school board to draft a plan and specifications for the extension, which it is estimated, will cost approximately $15,000. It is proposed to defray this expense by a special tax levy of about five mills which must be authorized by the taxpayers at a meeting to be held for that purpose.

The returns from increase attendance will cover the total cost of the improvement with four years, it is estimated, and it is argued that more than 100 additional students will come to Oregon City from various points in Clackamas county to attend school.

TWO MORE SCHOOLS ARE MADE STANDARD

Whiskey Hill school. A baseball brought it? Could you not even surgame and several other athletic con- mise whether it were a man or a tests occupied the forenoon and the woman?" standardization rally in the afternoon made the day a busy one. A basket dent effort. She had barely, as yet, hats on for the last half hour," Laura lunch was served at noon. May Yo- recovered from the shock of those der is the teacher of the Whiskey Hill awful hours. school which is located in the southern part of the county. Rev. Troyer talked on "The Child the Chief Object of the School," and Mr. Vedder thing. The most I ever saw was once made a short address when he presented the pennant. A large crowd attended the rally at Clairmont Friday night. Mr. Calavan talked on standardization and a program of 16 numbers was given by the school. Ice cream and cake were

3 SCHOOLS ARE FOUND UNDER REQUIREMENTS

In a preliminary examination Tuesfound the Oregon City high school slightly below the state standardizacause of lack of certain equipment and through failure to comply with other requirements.

The fact that the school failed to meet the standardization requirements at the preliminary examination, is not considered a serious defect in the school as another examination will be made before the beginning of the fall term and changes will be made to allow the school to meet the requirements before that time.

Mr. Wells with County Superintendent Calavan visited Parkplace and Milwankle as well as Oregon City and found the high schools in both of those towns below the standardization requirements.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

(By Florence Bierman.) George Hugg, principal of Eugene high school, was a visitor at the Oregon City high school Tuesday.

Frank W. Wells, assistant state su perintendent visited the Oregon City high school and made a thorough in spection of the school. The high school is above standard in everything with the exception of small technical matters. Mr. Wells spoke very complimentary of the high school.

Mr. Tooze entertained the teachers of the high school and the special teachers at his home Wednesday even- will drive to Clear Creek park, where ing. Dainty refreshments were served to the following: Miss Todd, Miss Busch, Miss Harding, Mrs. Cartlidge, Miss Bizagea and Mr. West and Mr.

Mr. Tooze has been asked to speak at the teachers' institute at Molalla next Saturday, May 1. An assembly was held Wednesday morning. J. E. Calavan spoke on Standardigation."

SYNOPSIS.

gon a life-and-death struggle with a myterious master criminal. In a hidden holi in Professor Ashleigh's garden he has seen an anthropold ape skeleton and a living inhuman creature, half monkey, half man, destroyed by fire. In his room have appeared from newhere black boxes, one containing diamonds forn from a lovely throat by a pair of armiesa, threatening hands, both with sarcastic, threatening notes signed by the inscrutable hands. He is arrested for the murder of his valet.
Ross Brown, and a Miss Quigg, in his rooms, Laura and Lanora, his assistants, suspect Craig, the professor's valet. Lenora is abducted by the threatening hands, but is rescued. Quest clears himself of the murder charge, but fails to trap Craig. In his rooms another black but appears in the rified safe and, returning the diamonds a second time, the accompanying note tells him he has no chance against the inherited cunning of ages.

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT THE HOUSE OF MYSTERY.

CHAPTER XVI.

Something in the nature of a conference was proceeding in Quest's study. The professor was there, seatchair, smoking without relish one of nervous impatience the closed door. table, dressed for the street. They had the air of being prepared for some excursion. Quest, realizing the professor's highly strung state, had left him alone for a few moments and was studying a map of New York. The latter, however, was too ill at ease to keep silent for long.

"Our friend French," he remarked, "gave you no clue, I suppose, as to the direction in which his investigations are leading him?"

Quest glanced up from the map. "None at all. I know, however, that the house in which Lenora here was confined is being watched closely." The professor glanced across toward the table before which Lenora was seated.

"It seems strange," he continued, "that the young lady should have so little to tell us about her incarcera-Lenora shivered for a moment. "What could there be to tell," she asked, "except that it was all horrible, and that I felt things-felt dangerswhich I couldn't describe.

The professor gave vent to an impatient little exclamation.

"I am not speaking for fancies," he were standardized Friday night: persisted. "You had food brought to Clairmont by Superintendent Calavan you, for instance. Could you never and Whiskey Hill by Supervisor Ved. see the hand which placed it inside your room? Could you hear nothing An all-day program was given at the of the footsteps of the person who

Lenora answered him with an evi-

"The person who brought me the food," she said, "came at night-never in the daytime. I never heard any--I happened to be looking toward the door and I saw a pair of handsnothing more-setting down a tray. I shricked and called out. I think that I almost fainted. When I found courage enough to look, there was nothing there but the tray upon the floor." The professor sighed as he turned away.

"It is evident, I am afraid," he said, 'that Miss Lenora's evidence will help no one. As an expert in these affairs, Mr. Quest, does it not seem to you that her imprisonment was just a little purposeless? There seems to have been no attempt to harm her in any

"Whoever took the risk of abductday by Frank K. Wells, assistant state ing her," Quest pointed out grimly, superintendent of public instruction, "did it for a purpose. That purpose would probably have been developed in course of time. However we tion requirements. The school does look at it, Mr. Ashleigh, there was not comply with the requirements be- only one man who must have been anxious to get her out of the way, and that man was Craig. Here comes our friend French. I have an idea that he has something to tell us." They glanced expectantly towards the door as French entered. The inspector, who was looking very spruce and well brushed, wished them a general good-morning. His eyes rested The Whole Staircase Suddenly Began last and longest upon Laura, who seemed, however, unconscious of his presence. "Now, then, French," Quest began, as he returned his greeting, "take a cigar, make yourself comfortable in that chair and let us have your news. As you see, we have obeyed orders. We are all ready to follow you anywhere." "It won't be to the end of the world, anyway," the inspector remarked, as he lit his cigar. "I am going to propose a little excursion down Gayson avenue way." "Back to that house?" Lenora exclaimed with a grimace.

The inspector nodded "We have had those boys at the Friday evening after school. The class and their friends will leave Oregon

City on a hayrack at 4 o'clock and

The Physical Culture class will meet

Many students attended the Swastika picnic held at Cedar Island. Miss

The seniors' play will be held at

Thursday evening after dismissal.

they will hold their picnic.

Busch chaperoned the party.

be held in the near future.

Shively's opera house, May 5.

station," he went on, "and we have questioned them carefully. It seems that after they had picked up the ball, a man came out of the side entrance of the house, saw them reading Miss Lenora's message, and shouted after them. The boys had sense enough to scoot. The man ran after them, but had to give it up. Here is their description of him."

The inspector took a piece of paper from his pocket. They all waited breathlessly. "Had to drag this out of the boys, bit by bit," the inspector proceeded, "but boiled down and put into reasonable language, this is what it comes A man of medium height, rather thin. pale, and after runsing a short distance he put his hand to his heart, as though out of breath. One of the boys thought his nose was a little booked, and they both remarked upon the fact that although he shouted after them, he used no swear words, but simply tried to induce them to stop. This description suggest anything to you, gentlemen?" "Craig," Lenora said firmly.

"It is a very accurate discription of Craig." Sanford Quest agreed. The professor looked troubled, also a little perplexed. He said nothing,

"Under these circumstances," the inspector continued, "I have had the house watched, and I propose that we now search it systematically. It is very possible that something may transpire to help us. Of course, my men went through it roughly when we brought Miss Lenora away, but that wasn't anything of a search to count, if the pisce really has become a haunt of criminals."

"What about the ownership of the house!" Quest asked, as he took up his hat

The inspector nodded approvingly. that direction," he announced. "I ex- slept was still crumpled. French, first, had taken their place pect to have something to report very shortly. The professor stood drawing on his gloves. The vague look of trouble still lingered in his face. "Tell me again," he begged, "the name of the avenue in which this residence is situated?" "Gayson avenue," the inspector replied. "It's a bit out of the way, but it's not a bad neighborhood." The professor repeated the address to himself softly. For a moment he stood quite still. His manner showed signs of growing anxiety. He seemed to be trying to remember something. "The name," he admitted finally, as they moved towards the door, "suggests to me, I must confess-we are going to see the house inspector?"

"We are on our way there now, sir -that is if the young ladies are willing?" he added, glancing at Laura.

We've been waiting here with our

to Revolve.

replied promptly. "You've stretched your ten minutes out some, Mr.

The inspector maneuvered to let the others pass on, and descended the stairs by Laura's side.

"Couldn't help it," he confided, lowering his tone a little. "Had some information in about that house [couldn't quite size up. You're looking well this morning, Miss Laura,"

"Say, who are you guying!" she raplied. "I mean it," the inspector persisted. "That hat seems to suit you."

Laura laughed at the top of her "Say Kid," she exclaimed to Le the landing above, his revolver in his nora, "the inspector here's setting up Lenora turned and looked at them both with an air of blank actouish ment. The inspector was a little em-

"No need to give me away like that."

he muttered, as they reached the hall.

"Now then, ladies and gentlemen, if

They took their places in the automobile and drove off. As they neared the vicinity of Gayson avenue the professor began to show signs of renewed uneasiness. When they drew up at last outside the house he gave a little exclamation. His face was

"Mr. Quest," he said, "Inspector

French, I deeply regret that I have

They both turned quickly toward him. The inspector smiled in a confidential manner at Laura. It was obvious that he knew what was com-continued. "I bought this house and Quest glanced around the place.

revealed no traces of habitation.

you what I have just discovered."

board. What do you think of that?"

French took the receiver from its

Then if your men have maintained their search properly, that someone," tered a wholly unfurnished room on the left-hand side. He looked for a minute contemplatively at a large but inches inside. There was a half-swung open and a man rushed out.

there was no necessity for its use.

"Walk out of the room," Quest or-

They all gave a little cry as they saw him appear, a trembling, pitiful creature, glancing around like a trapped animal. He commenced to to the banisters. Quest remained on able of any form of resistance.

stairs.'

house at the present moment."

show you something directly."

The professor shook his head.

"Don't ask me," he groaned.

rest and called up the exchange.

'Inspector French

subscriber?"

telephone."

agreed.

another question.

watched, inspector?"

last twenty-four hours."

be an ordinary panel.

ment

made a present of it to-"

sor admitted with a grean.

"Some years ago," the professor

The sophomore plenic will be held UNION HIGH SCHOOL PLANNED tion to decide on the organization. The school board at a recent meeting. MILWAUKIE TEACHERS NAMED Mickey, Miss Edna Armstrong and These will be circulated and placed in The instructors during the school At the special election held Saturday | the hands of the county boundary In Victory, Orient, Lusted and Cottrell | board, and if these petitions contain | grades, Rhea Benson: Sunset third | night Robert Goetz was reappointed school districts to decide on the site a sufficient number of signatures an and fourth grudes, Carmen Schmidil election will be called in each of the Sunset, fifth and sixth grades, Mrs. the proposed union high school dis-

WEST LINN TEACHERS NAMED.

He Was Wearing Craig's Clothes. hand. French waited in the hall be-"To whom?" Quest asked quickly. "To my servant Craig," the profess low, also armed. Laura gripped Le- that fellow before I'm through!" nora's arm in excitement. Lenora gave a little cry. She turned "They've got him now!" she extriumphantly towards the inspector. claimed. "Got him, sure!" "All recollection as to its locality On the fourth or fifth stair Craig had escaped me," the professor conhesitated. He suddenly saw the protinued sorrowfully, "I remember that fessor standing below. He gripped it was on the anniversary of his have the banisters with one hand. The ing been with me for some fifteen other he flung out in a threatening years that I decided to show him gesture. some substantial mark of my appre-"You've given me away to these ciation. I knew that he was looking bloodhounds!" he cried-"you, for for a domicile for his father and whom I have tolled and slaved, whom mother, who are since both dead, I have followed all over the world, and I requested a house agent to send whom I have served faithfully with me in a list of suitable residences, the last breath of my body and the This, alas! was the one I purchased." last drop of blood in my veins! You have brought them here-tracked me "I think," he said, "that the profesdown! You!'

sor's statement now removes any The professor shook his head sordoubt as to Craig's guilt. You are rowfully sure the house has been closely "Craig." he said, "you have been the best servant man ever had. If "Since I received certain informa- you are innocent of these crimes you tion," French replied, "I have had can clear yourself. If you are guilty half a dozen of my best men in the a dog's death is none too good for vicinity. I can assure you that no you."

one has entered or left it during the Craig seemed to sway for a moment upon his feet. Only Lenora, from the They made their way to the piazza hall, saw that he was fitting his right steps and entered by the front door, foot into what seemed to be a leath-The house was an ordinary frame- er loop hanging from the banisters. work one of moderate size, in poor re- Then a wild shout of surprise broke pair, and showing signs of great neg- from the lips of all of them, followed The rooms were barely furby a moment of stupefied wonder. nished and their first cursory search The whole staircase suddenly began to revolve. Craig, clinging to the There was still the broken skylight banisters, disappeared. In a moment in the room which Lenora had occuor two there was a fresh click. An-"I am making a few inquiries in | pled, and the bed upon which she had other set of stairs, identical to the

who had been tapping the walls down-"The cellar!" Quest shouted, as he stairs, called to them. They trooped rushed down the stairs. "Quick!"

down into the hall. The inspector They wrenched open the wooden was standing before what appeared to door and hurried down the dark steps into the gloomy, unlit cellar. The "Look here," he said, glancing out place was crowded with packing cases of the corner of his eye to be sure and two large wine barrels stood in that Laura was there, "let me show the corner. At the farther end was a door. Quest rushed for it and stood He felt with his thumb for a spring, guard. A moment later, however, he called to Laura and pressed his re-In a moment or two a portion of the wall, about two feet in extent, slowly volver into her hand.

"Stand there," he ordered. "Shoot revolved, disclosing a small cuphim if he tries to run out. I'll search board fitted with a telephone instruin the packing cases. He might be "A telephone," the inspector re-dangerous." The professor, out of breath, was marked, pointing to it, "in an unocculeaning against one of the pillars, house and a concealed cuphis arm passed around it for support. Lenora. with Quest and French. searched hastily amongst the packing cases. Suddenly there was a loud followed by a scream from Laura. the number of the telephone from toward her. She was lying on her read the message aloud: which I am speaking, and who is the side, already half covered by falling bricks and masonry. He dragged her

He listened to the reply and asked away, just in time. "My God, she's fainted!" he ex-

"Can you tell me when this instruclaimed. ment was last used? . . . When? "I haven't," Laura faltered, trying to open her eyes, "and I'm not going The inspector hung up the receiver. to, but I think my arm's broken, and

"The subscriber's name," he told my side hurts." them dryly, "is Brown. The number "The fellow's not down here, anyis not entered in the book, by re- way," Quest declared. "Let's help her quest. The telephone was used an upstairs and get her out of this hour ago from a call office and condevil's house." They supported her up the steps nection was established. That is to say, that someone spoke from this and found a chair for her in the hall. The inspector swung open the telephone cupboard and called for an ambulance. Then Quest, who had been

Quest said slowly, "must be in the examining the staircase, suddenly gave a little exclamation. "Without a doubt," the inspector "He's done us!" he cried. "Look case. There's the leather loop. I And a lifebuoy! Wait." "I am going to search the front room on the first floor before we do know it because there was a crack on anything else," said Quest. "I think the fourth stair. When we rushed that if you wait here I may be able to down the cellar after him, he swung the thing round again and simply Quest ascended the stairs and en-walked out of the front door. Damn ft, man, ft's open!" They hurried outside. French blew his whistle. One of the plain-clothes that calendar right?" rather shallow cupboard, the door of men came running up from the avewhich stood open, and tapped lightly nue. He was looking a little sheep-with his forefinger upon the back part ish. of it. Then he withdrew a few feet "What's wrong?" French demandand, drawing out his revolver, delib. ed.

erately fired into the floor, a few "He's gone off," was the unwilling reply. "I guess that chap's given us to Mr. French's office.

stifled cry. The false back suddenly the slip.

"Speak up," French insisted. Quest's revolver covered him, but "we hadn't our eyes glued on was Craig, smothered with dust, his face the front door. He must have come ger steamers start from-lower down. white as a piece of marble, even his out through that. There's been a jaw shaking with fear, was wholly motortruck with one or two queerunarmed. He seemed, in fact, incaplooking chaps in it at the corner of the avenue there for the last ten mindered, "in front of me-so! Now stroll round and see what it was up turn to the right and go down the side, shouted out. A man jumped up into it and they made off at once."

The inspector's rubicund countenance was white with fury. His head stop outside and French appeared. kept turning in the direction of Laura, descend the stairs, holding tightly to whom the professor was busy rendering first aid.

year 1915-16 will be: Principal Jerome W. Howard: Sunset primary

"If I never take another job on as long as I live," he declared, "I'll have

CHAPTER XVII.

The professor roused himself from what had apparently been a very gloomy reverts.

'Well," he announced, "I must go home. It has been very kind of you, Mr. Quest, to keep me here for so long.

Quest glanced at the clock. "Don't hurry, Mr. Ashleigh," he sald. "We may get some news at any moment. French has a dozen men out on the search and he has prom-hears anything." The professor sighed.

"A man," he declared, "who for twenty years can deceive his master tain assured them. as utterly and completely as Craig has done me, who is capable of such diabolical outrages, and who, when capture stares him in the face, is capable of an escape such as he made today, is outside the laws of probability. Personally, I do not believe that I shall ever again see the face of my servant, any more than that you, Quest, will entirely solve the mystery of these murders and the theft of the Rheinholdt jewels. What can we do against men who have revolving staircases and trolley-loads of river pirates waiting for them? You may be a scientific criminologist, Quest, but that fellow Craig is a scientific criminal, if ever there was cigar cabinet, and opened it. His little start was apparent to both of them. Lenora laid down the bag which she had just lifted up. The professor leaned forward in his chair.

"What is it, Quest?" he demanded. Quent stretched out his hand and picked up from the top of the cigars a small black box! He laid it on the

"Unless I am very much mistaken," he said, "it is another communication from our mysterious friend." "Impossible!" the professor exclaimed hoarsely.

"How can he have been here?" Leera cried. Quest removed the lid from the box and drew out a circular card. Around the outside edge was a very clever pen and ink sketch of a lifebuoy, and inside the margin were crack, the sound of falling masonry, several sentences of clear handwriting. In the middle was the sign announced. "Kindly tell me what is French, with a roar of anger, rushed ture—the clenched hands! Quest In the great scheme of things, the Supreme Ruler of the universe divided an inheritance amongst his children. To one he gave power, to another strength, to another beauty, but to his favorite he gave cunning. They all looked at one another. "What does it mean?" Lenora

"A lifebuoy!" the professor murmured. They both stared at Quest, who remained silent, chewing hard at the end of his cigar. "Every message," he said, speaking half to himself, "has had some significance. What does this mean-a lifebuoy?" He was silent for a moment. Then he turned suddenly to the professor.

"What did you call those men in the here. French, this is the original stair- motortruck, professor-river pirates? He crossed the room towards his desk and returned with a list in his hand. He ran his finger down it, stopped and glanced at the date. "The Durham," he muttered, "cargo cotton, destination Southampton, sails at high tide on the 16th. Lenora, is "It's the 16th, Mr. Quest," she an-

Quest crossed the room to the telephone.

"I want number one, central," he "Thank you! Put me through Infd. Hello, French! I've got an idea. Can you come round here at once and bring "The only place," the man went on, an automobile? I want to get down to the docks-not where the passen-

Quest hung up the receiver. "See here, professor," he continued, "that fellow wouldn't dare to send utes. I'd just made up my mind to this message if he weren't pretty sure of getting off. He's made all his to when Jim, who was on the other plans beforehand, but it's my belief we shall just get our hands upon him, after all.

Good! We'll wait."

Presently the heard the automobile "Anything doing?" he asked. Quest showed him the card and the sailing list.

The inspector glanced at the clock

At a meeting of the directors of the Milwaukie school district Saturday

"Then we've got to make tracks." he declared, "and pretty quick, too. She'll be starting from somewhere about number twenty-eight dock, a long way down. Come along, gentle-

They hurried out to the automobile and started off for the docks. The latter part of their journey was ac complished under difficulties, for the street was packed with drays and heavy vehicles. They reached dock number twenty-eight at last, however, and hurried through the shed on to the wharf. There were no signs of a steamer there.

"Where's the Durham?" Quest asked one of the carters, who was just getting his team together.

The man pointed out to the middle of river, where a small steamer was lying

"There she is," he replied. "She'll be off in a few minutes. You'll hear the sirens directly when they begin to move down.

Quest led the way quickly to the edge of the wharf. There was a small tug there, the crew of which were just making her fast for the night.

"Fifty dollars if you'll take us out to the Durham and catch her before she salls," Quest shouted to the man who seemed to be the captain. They clambered down the tron ladder and jumped on to the deck of the tug. The captain seized the wheel The two men who formed the crew took off their coats and waistcoats. "Give it to her, Jim," the former or dered. "Now then, here goes! We'll just miss the ferry." They swung around and commenced their journey. Quest stood with his watch in his hand. They were getting up the anchor of the Durham and ised to ring me up immediately he from higher up the river came the screech of steamers beginning to move on their outward way.

"We'll make it all right," the cap-

They were within a hundred yards of the Durham when Quest gave a lit tle exclamation. From the other side of the steamer another tug shot out away, turning back towards New York. Huddled up in the atern, half concealed in a tarpaulin, was a man in a plain black suit. Quest, with a little shout, recognized the man at the helm from his long, brown beard.

"That's one of those fellows who was in the truck," he declared, "and that's Craig in the stern! We've got him this time. Say, captain, it's that tug I want. Never mind about the steamer. Catch it and I'll make it a hundred dollars!"

"We've got her!" he captain exclaimed. There's the ferry and the Quest crossed the room towards his first of the steamers coming down in the middle. They'll have to chuck it." Right ahead of them, blazing with lights, a huge ferry came churning the river up and sending waves in their direction. On the other side, Quest Stood on Guard. unnaturally large, loomed up the great bows of an ocean-going steamer. The tug was swung round and they ran up alongside. The man with the beard leaned over. "Say, what's your trouble?" he de manded The inspector stepped forward. "I want that man you've got under the tarpaulin," he announced. "Say, you ain't the river police?

"I'm Inspector French from headquarters," was the curt reply. "The sooner you hand him over, the better for you.' "Do you hear that, O'Toole?" the other remarked, turning around. "Get up, you blackguard!"

A man rose from underneath the oliskin. He was wearing Craig's clothes, but his face was the face of a stranger. As quick as lightning Quest swung round in his place. "He's fooled us again!" he exclaimed. "Head her round, captain-back to the Durham!" The sailor shook his head.

"We've lost our chance, guvnor," he pointed out. "Look!" Quest set his teeth and gripped the aspector's arm. The place where the Durham had been anchored was empty. Already, half a mile down the river, with a trail of light behind and her siren shricking, the Durham was standing out seawards. CTO BE CONTINUED.

Miss Kate Casto. Appointment of a music teacher and drawing instructor was postponed until the annual meeting of the taxpayers June 21, in order to give them an opportunity to pass on

It is the testimony of the Albany Democrat that salesday week "is now the best one of the month, because it brings extra business here, without detracting from the regular business of the proposed union high school, the Hood railroad, was selected, the exact location to be made later when the trict. union high school district is formed The students are planning their The vote Saturday was the first step work for the annual exhibit which will in the organization of the union district. County School Superintendent Armstrong of Multnomah county will prepare petitions asking for an elec-

West Linn schools was re-elected by sen for the Bolton school.

grades, Bess Warner; Bolton fourth, fifth and sixth grades. Clare Sterns: Bolton seventh and eighth, L. Madefor both schools, Miss Moreita Hickman. A Buse was elected janitor for new Pleasant Home, on the Mount four districts on the organization of Ethel M. Tripp; Bolton, primary high school will be as follows: Col- science for music and drawing. line Barlow; and music and drawing The following teachers of the gram-Practically every teacher in the two the Sunset building and P. Christen- Miss Anna J. Young; Miss Louise Con-principal of the high and grammar school. The other teachers of the the question of substituting domestic ton Meek, mathematics and science; Miss Ohmert, English and history: Miss Campbell, Germany and Latin. mar school were appointed: Miss Mary Hamilton, Miss Letta Tyrider, nor, Miss Minnie Emmel, Miss Olah | between times."