THE FOLLY, hardly short of criminal, of entrusting the conduct of the foreign affairs of this country to one so manifestly incompetent as William J. Bryan has been strikingly illustrated by the so-called Bryan-Dumba incident.

On February 10 the president, over Mr. Bryan's signature, notified Germany that "we should be constrained to hold the imperial government to a strict accountability if any German vessel of war should destroy on the high seas an American vessel or the lives of American citizens."

When this was learned here, Mr. Bryan again saw Dr. Dumba and induced him to advise Berlin that he had placed a wrong construction on Mr. Bryan's words, and this government procured safe conduct for Dr. Meyer-Gerhardt to Berlin in order that he might advise the German government of the exact attitude of this government.

The Courier calls the automobile club which requested the expenditure of the license money on the north and south road through the county "anonymous." The slight investigation, a brief interview with any member of the county court or a question directed at almost any local automobile owner would have shown easily that it was the Clackamas county club.

But he probably figured that it was too much trouble. Investigation would have removed the chance to use so cleverly that word "anonymous." The Courier is not satisfied with the county court, but that is nothing to the detriment of the court. Who expects to satisfy the Courier?

That being the case, how far were those indistinct words responsible for the continuance of Germany's submarine policy and the sinking of the "Gulflight" and the "Lusitania"? The steamship company who would entrust a passenger ship carrying a thousand souls to an incompetent captain would be condemned for all time.

What, then, of the president who, during a grave international crisis, entrusted the Ship of State, with its passenger list of 100,000,000 souls, to so notoriously incompetent a skipper as Captain Bryan?

DURING THE EARLIER DAY OF THE MOTOR-CAR, to be seen riding in an automobile was a sign of wealth and luxury. People of modest means and humble social position felt flattered to be invited to ride even a short distance in a machine.

Laborers working on the roads were often seen shaking their fists at passing motorists. The machine in their minds stood as the representative of a cruel capitalistic system of wealth and luxury. It was the proletariat defying and aristocracy manifested in the flesh in their presence.

In the rural districts the feeling was bitter. One farmer was known to put a gun in the back of his wagon on his way to town, openly threatening that he would use it on the first motorist he met.

The abuses of operation of automobiles have grown worse rather than better since that time. Whenever there are cities and large towns, the roads are crowded with a pushing, hurrying crowd of drivers. How this traffic is to be regulated, and common decency enforced on people of rash temperament, is one of the daily problems of life.

Meanwhile the recent notable price cuts in machines, and others likely soon to come, are bringing the automobile within reach of a new army of buyers. Already a moderate priced automobile, with good care, is cheaper to maintain than a horse and carriage.

The automobile is no longer a badge or expression of class feeling. Soon the man of wealth may begin retiring from a company which is growing too common for his taste. The farmers are said to own more of them than any one class. The motor crowd in exterior aspects is far from bearing the marks of distinction. It all looks plain and common enough, in one equal democracy of dust.

THE RULES BEING ISSUED BY HUMANE SOCIETIES for care of horses in hot weather should not be heedlessly thrown into the waste basket by hurried business men and others.

An old fashioned driver once made the remark, that whenever his horse had a hill to climb, he let him walk for three rods on the top of the slope before urging him up into a trot. It was good advice for all who own horses in a country where there are hills. But most drivers in the ordinary light carriage would laugh at the idea and will whip up a horse before he reaches the top of a slope and before he has gained his breath.

In many places there are complaints that dealers selling heavy articles in bulk, such as coal, will pile unreasonable loads on horses where such goods are bought in large quantities. Goods can often be bought cheaper in large quantities delivered at a dealer's convenience, but economies if made at the expense of horse flesh seem hardly worth while.

The most important item in the hot weather rules for animals, is to load lightly and drive slowly. Drivers whose time is valuable should be fitted out with motor trucks that can get over the ground at a better rate. A draft horse's great power of wind and muscle is obtained at the sacrifice of quickness. One of these plodding beasts may be hastened over the road by a free use of the whip. But the owner takes something out of his flesh and nerve power every time he does it. If it is long kept up, the owner will need a new horse.

Comparatively few people make use of nets or other covering to protect horses against insects. The horse has a peculiarly nervous temperament, and

The Chautauqua speaker who took the Bible as the subject for one of the best lectures of this assembly struck a responsive chord in the hearts of his audience. Where is there an American crowd which would find this subject, handled as A. A. Franke handled it, dry or uninteresting?

'AN OILY MESS' is an appropriate caption over an editorial in the Courier of last week. The particular grievance of this plaintive wail is that $1600 derived from the sale of state license tags is going to be spent on roads according to the request of the Clackamas County Automobile club.

The Courier is opposed to letting the automobile owners suggest where money derived by a direct tax on them shall be spent. Perhaps that paper would prefer to let the court be guided by suggestions from the Portland Commercial club or the Chicago Board of Trade.

The Courier, however, is not alone. The Estacada Progress with its usual critical attitude of all things in other parts of the county has seen fit to jump on the court. In fact, the eastern Clackamas newspaper was the first to begin throwing verbal bricks at the county officials in regard to this road oiling.

We quote from the Courier: "Presumably the county court didn't know how it happened that the road down the west side of the river was smeared with oil so that automobiles slipped into the ditch and so that horses got mired in the oozy stuff."

This stretch of road is NOT EVEN IN CLACKAMAS COUNTY. It is located entirely within Multnomah county. Perhaps the Courier can show some connection between the Clackamas county court and this Multnomah county road.

The Courier calls the automobile club which requested the expenditure of the license money on the north and south road through the county "anonymous." The slight investigation, a brief interview with any member of the county court or a question directed at almost any local automobile owner would have shown easily that it was the Clackamas county club.

But he probably figured that it was too much trouble. Investigation would have removed the chance to use so cleverly that word "anonymous." The Courier is not satisfied with the county court, but that is nothing to the detriment of the court. Who expects to satisfy the Courier?

THIS COUNTRY is getting uncomfortably like Russia. There have been seven attempts to blow up public and other buildings within a year in the city of New York alone and similar deeds in many other places. Now comes the nearly fatal attempt on J. P. Morgan, followed up by the placing of a bomb in the New York police station. What next?

The more or less demented persons who are wandering about the country, planning some crazy deed of violence, sending threatening letters to prominent public men, is a constant menace to all holding high station. Probably the men at the head of large manufacturing corporations could tell similar tales if they cared to.

After such events, the suggestion is usually made by many people that additional restrictions be placed on the sale of firearms. Probably this should be done, but principally to keep the weapons away from roughs and rowdies. The crank whose mind is red with inflamed passion against some public dignitary or policy can never be prevented in this manner from getting deadly weapons.

Fortunately a diseased mind has little gift for concealment. Its morbid passion demands expression. The cracked brain keeps its own thoughts no more easily than the cracked vessel holds water. Police officers and friends who allow a morbid minded man to roam at large assume a heavy responsibility.

Arguing with men who get these queer mental streaks is apt to be useless. Unless one was very tactful, they would be only irritated. Probably their lack of balance is due primarily to low states of nervous vitality. Putting them on some not over strenuous job at farming or gardening would do them more good than seeking to convert them to sanity. A quiet life in the sunshine, co-operating in the orderly processes of nature, would restore many queer minds to a more normal balance.

THE DEMOCRATS SUFFERED A DEFEAT in the Illinois judicial elections, held in June, the significance of which appears to have been entirely lost sight of by the general press. So signal an overturning of political sentiment would have been heralded far and wide had it not been for the extent to which the newspapers are crowded by war news. Out of 71 circuit judges elected in Illinois, the Democrats secured only 19, and of these 17 were already incumbents, being re-elected. In Cook county, which includes Chicago, the Republicans elected four of the five judges of the supreme court and 14 of the 20 circuit court judges. The six Democrats chosen for the circuit court were all re-elected. In Illinois outside of Cook county the Republicans elected 32 judges and the Democrats 13. Six independent or non-partisan judges were elected outside of Cook county. This election, it is noteworthy, was held at a time when Mr. Wilson was supposed to be at the zenith of his power, when his disastrous Mexican policy had for the moment been lost sight of and when, because of the crisis with Germany, Republican as well as Democratic editors were patriotically urging the people to support the president. Close friends of Mr. Wilson are much depressed by this showing.

In an editorial, the Christian Science Monitor says that "i a year when depression seized upon upon many of Canada's leading industries, among those that assisted materially to prevent a complete upset of the balance was lumber production." This brief statement should be of great interest to the American people. A brief consideration of import statistics shows why lumbering has been so material a factor in maintaining business in Canada at a time when that industry is paralyzed in the United States. The mills of the Pacific coast have been closed down or running on short time. Logging camps have been idle and the wheels of shingle mills do not turn. During the month of March, 1913, under a protective tariff, imports of shingles into the United States amounted to only $60,000. During the same month in 1914, the imports increased to $195,000, and in March, 1915 to $244,000—more than four times the amount of the imports under a protective tariff. It requires no argument or comment to show why the lumber industry "has prevented a complete upset of the balance" in Canada, and why idle lumbermen are not buying extensively of foodstuffs, clothing, machinery and other commodities in the United States.

may suffer more from the persistent attack of a fly than from the drawing of an over heavy load. The horse with a docked tail may give his owner a commonplace feeling of good style. But some people would rather give the poor beast nature's long tail as a weapon against tormenting insects.

HOLT'S REMAINS SOUGHT. DALLAS, Texas, July 8.—Mrs. Leona Holt, wife of Frank Holt, assistant of J. P. Morgan, today ordered her husband's ashes sent to Dallas. The original plan was that Holt should be buried at Ithaca, N. Y., but the new order was sent to New York following the collection of hot services in Dallas Sunday. Mrs. Holt intends to make her future home with her father here.

RUSSIAN BARK TORPEDOED. LONDON, July 9.—The Russian steel bark Marion Lightbody, en route to England from Valparaiso, was sunk by a submarine yesterday off the coast of Ireland. The crew was saved and landed today. The bark was a vessel of 2716 tons.

ATHENS July 9.—A German officer of high rank was among 500 prisoners taken by the allies in the Dardanelles on Tuesday, according to a dispatch received from Mytilene today.

VIENNA, July 9.—Austria today apologized to American Ambassador Penfield because the Neues Wiener Tagblatt printed an attack on President Woodrow Wilson and the United States because of America's protest against the diver warfare of the Tenthent allies. The apology was forthcoming after Penfield inquired whether the newspaper voiced the opinion of the Austrian government.

Citrolax CITROLAX Best thing for constipation, sour stomach, lax liver and sluggish bowels. Stops a sick headache almost at once. Gives a most thorough and satisfactory flushing—no pain, no nausea. Keeps your system cleansed, sweet and wholesome.—H. H. Welbeck, Salt Lake City, Utah, writes: "I find Citrolax the best laxative I ever used. Does not gripe—no unpleasant after-effects."
