

PREPARE NOW FOR FAIR AT SALEM IS ADVICE

R. M. STANDISH APPEALS TO FARMERS TO AID IN GATHERING SAMPLES.

While Clackamas county won all honors at the state fair last year, it should make an even better showing this fall...

"Last year, the work of collecting these grains and grasses was put off until harvest time and consequently few good specimens of the earlier products were obtainable..."

"Short out right now and lay aside a few bundles of your best grains and grasses," he advised.

The committee in charge of the various exhibits from the county, especially wish to obtain fine samples of alfalfa, rye, oats, wheat, buckwheat, barley, timothy, clovers, red top, alkyne broom, field and sweet corn, canary seed, millets and vetches.

All samples will be collected at later dates, if the growers will notify Mr. Standish, manager Clackamas county state fair exhibit at Estacada...

WORK IS BEGUN ON PIPELINE INTAKE

PRACTICALLY ALL OF 16-INCH PIPE LAID—MATERIAL ARRIVES HERE SLOWLY.

Up in the mountains back of Estacada, on the each branch of the South Fork of the Clackamas river work has begun on the intake of the South Fork water line.

The dam which will guide the water from the branch into the pipe is now being built and within a short time work will be under way on the settling tank which is necessary for the removal of air from the water before it enters the pipe.

Engineer Rands said Saturday that with the exception of one tunnel and wet excavation at Clear creek, all the trench work was completed. All the 16-inch pipe, which is laid along the lower end of the line, has been put in the ground with the exception of about a mile. Piping at the upper end of the project has been held back slightly by the delay in the arrival of 18-inch pipe from the east.

INSURANCE FIRMS WILL BE STUDIED

SALEM, Ore., July 20.—Declaring that the policy holders of the Horticultural Fire Relief of Oregon, the Oregon Merchants Mutual Fire Assurance association and the Pacific Home Mutual Fire company were demanding that the responsibility for their insolvency be fixed, Insurance Commissioner Wells announced today that in a few days he would ask the circuit court to make a sweeping investigation of their business transactions in the state.

"It is apparent that the policy holders want the responsibility for the insolvency of these companies established, and I will ask the court that an investigation be made," said the insurance commissioner. "I found nothing that would lead me to believe otherwise than that the directors were honest and sincere, but an investigation should be made by all means, and it should not stop with an investigation of the officers, but should continue throughout the state. In other words, investigate the business they wrote, and what losses they paid."

IN SUCH PAIN WOMAN CRIED

Suffered Everything Until Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Florence, So. Dakota.—"I used to be very sick every month with bearing down pains and backache, and had headache a good deal of the time and very little appetite. The pains were so bad that I used to sit right down on the floor and cry, because it hurt me so and I could not do any work at those times. An old woman advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I got a bottle. I felt better the next month so I took three more bottles of it and got well so I could work all the time. I hope every woman who suffers like I did will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. P. W. LANGRISH, Box 8, Allyn, Wash.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

JURY EXONERATES CAR CREW FROM ALL BLAME

VERDICT IS LACOURSE CAME TO DEATH THROUGH CAUSES UNKNOWN TO JURY.

Beyond exonerating the car crew, a coroner's jury Thursday refused to fix the responsibility for the death of William LaCourse, who was run over by a Portland-bound interurban car near Island station early Wednesday morning. The verdict of the jury was that LaCourse came to his death through a "cause unknown to this jury." The crew on the car was in no way to blame for the death of LaCourse, the jury decided.

While there was no testimony introduced at the inquest which would tend to show that LaCourse was the victim of foul play, the jury refused to hold positively that the car was responsible for his death. It has been suggested that LaCourse was slugged and that his body was placed on the car track so that the crime could be concealed. Motorman testified that he saw the body of LaCourse when within about twenty feet of it and that he did not see it move.

Sheriff Wilson said, when the verdict of the jury was read, that he would not investigate the case further and added that he was satisfied the car killed LaCourse. The jurymen and Coroner Hempstead were convinced that in case of foul play it would be impossible to locate any wound on account of the many bruises on the body.

The jury was out 15 minutes. E. T. Mass, S. O. Dillman, E. P. Elliott, H. Graves, S. A. D. Hunsage and Roy Cox sat on the jury. Charles Sievers, deputy coroner, assisted Coroner Hempstead at the inquest.

FRAUD IN REAL ESTATE DEAL IS CHARGED

R. S. McArthur and Mabel E. McArthur transferred their property near New Era to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David M. McArthur, in order to defraud their creditors, alleged William Pfeiffer who has filed a suit in the circuit court against them, asking that the deed conveying the land be set aside. Will Mulvey is appearing for Mr. Pfeiffer.

Pfeiffer held a note for $150 against Mr. and Mrs. R. S. McArthur and earlier in this year secured a judgment in the circuit court. When the time came to foreclose on the property which the McArthurs had owned at the time the note was signed, Pfeiffer found that the land had been transferred to McArthur's parents. One payment, $34.75, has been made on the note.

SI DUNNEVOTER IS POET.

It is at Wilsonville of the Willamette that Clackamas county has a man in whom is combined a love of the national game and ability to write poetry. The incident around this latest verse of his, produced herewith, is familiar to all in the Willamette country. It's poem follows:

St. Peter stood guard at the gates on high. Some he let enter, many went by. A young lady came from Mountain Road.

She was running light—she carried no load. Speaking to St. Peter, she said to him: "I'm a nice young lady; my name is Jim."

I never did anybody I couldn't do. Please, Mr. Peter, let me pass through.

He looked at her—his face was sad. He looked up her record—he knew she had.

Finding the place he gravely said: "What you been saying about our Friend Edd?"

Let's see, you said he was crooked; now that's not all. You said he was rotten umpiring ball.

You called him a Jack—my what a name. Just for umpiring a fair ball game. Now, look through the door, my unfortunate girl.

There stands Edd, a golden ring on his curls. In a flowing robe, a harp in his hands. Making music with the Angel bands.

You ask to enter, with the Godly throng. When you and poor Edd can't get along? Sad young lady are the ways of sin. Try and do better and call again.

Sadly she turned to the backward track. Oh, why did I call Edward a long-eared Jack? Now, he's not so bad, so gallant and tall.

Why, I like him a little after all. —St. Dunnevoter.

Of much interest to Oregon City society was the marriage of Miss Madge K. Brightbill to Lionel D. Gordon, of Marshfield. The wedding, a pretty home affair, was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Brightbill Wednesday evening at 7:15 o'clock. Rev. G. K. Berry, of Portland, used the ministerial service in performing the ceremony. Mr. Berry officiated at the wedding of the bride's parents in Pennsylvania.

The bride was charming in a gown of creamy white tulle, trimmed with chianti lace and pearls, her veil was held in place with a string of pearls, white satin slipper covered a part of her tresses, her bouquet was of bride's roses and white sweet peas. Preceding the ceremony and as the bride and her maid of honor were descending the stairs, Miss Louise Walker sang "At Dawn." They were met at the approach of the parlor by the groom and his brother, Emil, who acted as best man and on entering the parlor, Mrs. Violetta Gordon Wright and Miss Florence Grace played Mendelssohn's wedding march. The bridal party proceeded to an improvised altar of ferns and white roses, intermingled with satin streamers, where the wedding was performed.

Mrs. Gordon is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Brightbill, her father is a business man of Oregon City. She has resided here for the past ten years, coming from Harrisburg, Pa., her birthplace, where she attended the primary department of the Illinois Eastern school. After coming to this city she entered Oregon City high school and graduated with the class of 1910. She is prominent in musical circles and is a popular society maid; she studied music under Frank Ritchie of Portland. She was also a teacher for three terms in Oregon City schools where she won much favor.

Mr. Gordon was born in Glenwood, Iowa. He resided in Oregon City a number of years and later went to Marshfield, Oregon, where he and his brother Harry, are still in business.

After the marriage service a reception was held at the Brightbill home for the fifty invited guests. The dining room, living room and parlor were a mass of choice flowers and ferns.

Otto Staub, the Swiss, who was committed to the insane asylum this week after he offered his life for the Hill murder, is worth between $2000 and $3000 in cash, according to Christopher J. Hayes, a Portland attorney, who was in town investigating the case.

Hayes represents the Geneva Dairy company and brought to Oregon City a $20 gold piece which Staub threw in one of the company's wagons when he was on his way here. The wagon was driven by Antonio Schless, who turned the money over to his employer. The gold piece was deposited here with County Treasurer Dunn by Hayes.

WEATHER IS HOTTEST SINCE JUNE 1907

GOVERNMENT RECORDS SHOW DAY WARMEST FOR 8 YEARS —THERMOMETER 99 HERE

A regular eastern heat wave hit Oregon City Tuesday afternoon, the thermometer climbing up to the 99-degree mark, nearly five degrees higher than on July 1 and the record for the year.

Last year the highest temperature recorded by weather bureau thermometer in Portland was 94, this mark being reached on June 15 and July 18.

Northwestern Oregon's highest temperature as set down by the official government records is 102, reached on July 23, 1891, and July 30, 1907.

It is not believed that the present heat wave will continue more than three or four days as wether history in this part of the state has always been notable for sudden drops after the highest point has been reached.

Clouds were already beginning to form Tuesday afternoon and the coming of clouds means cooler weather, according to District Forecaster Drake.

LAKEWOOD HOME IS FOUND TO BE ROBBED

When Mrs. J. E. Gelnaskie returned to her home at Lakewood on the interurban carline at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, she found that her home had been looted. From basement to attic, every loose article had been examined. Clothes were scattered over the floor, drawers opened and every corner of the house searched.

But not one article was taken. Mrs. Gelnaskie checked over her belongings to find that nothing was gone.

Sheriff Wilson was called and within a short time was at the Gelnaskie home. He spent half of the afternoon and part of the night at Lakewood and Milwaukie, endeavoring to locate the man responsible for the latest of a series of daylight robberies in the northern part of the county. It is not known at exactly what time the house was robbed as Mrs. Gelnaskie had not been home for several days.

FRED MYERS, MARQUAM FARMER, SUED HERE

Fred Myers, well-to-do landowner of the Marquam district is made defendant in a suit for $913 filed in the circuit court by T. G. Garrett, who holds a lease on property owned by Myers. Dimick & Dimick and Will Mulvey appear for Garrett.

Garrett claims that he holds a lease on part of Myers' property and that their contract does not expire until next October. Early in the year, Garrett alleges, he was forced to take his wife to Molalla for medical treatment and left the farm for a short time after securing the consent of Myers. During his absence, the plaintiff says, Myers put a new tenant on the place, appropriated material belonging to Garrett and took advantage of crops planted by Garrett.

The value of the crops is estimated at $784 by Garrett. In a second cause of action, Garrett asks for $129 alleged to be due for labor performed.

SOUTH FORK LINE SUB-CONTRACTOR SUES FOR $5000

OREGON ENGINEERING & CONSTRUCTION COMPANY DEFENDANT IN COURT.

FIRM FOUND PROFITS LARGE AND BROKE CONTRACT SAYS PLAINTIFF

Guy Wallace Alleges on $13,000 Job He Would Receive $5250 Clear Profit—Action Based on Alleged Breach.

Guy L. Wallace, of Portland, who holds a sub-contract for laying all the pipe in the south fork water project, Tuesday filed a suit in the circuit court against the Oregon Engineering & Construction company, alleging breach of contract. Wallace asks for $5,250, which he claims would have been his profits in case the contract was carried out.

Wallace and the Oregon Engineering & Construction company signed a contract April 8, 1915, under the terms of which the former was to lay 131,250 feet of pipe, the entire line, at 10 cents a foot. The defendant was to supply all material delivered and delivery was to begin May 15, Wallace claims.

But after the contract was signed, Wallace says, the contracting company began to add new restrictions and conditions which made the completion of the contract almost impossible. The plaintiff alleges that the Oregon Engineering & Construction company demanded he guarantee the line from all defects, cave-ins and breaks until the South Fork commission took over the line. This was impossible, Wallace claims, as he had no authority to inspect this material and pipe which the contracting company wished him to guarantee.

At 10 cents a foot, Wallace figures that he would receive $13,125 for the job. He says that he could lay the line for 6 cents a foot, leaving a profit of $5,250, the amount of the suit.

The complaint was prepared in the office of Thomas Mannix, a Portland attorney. A clerk from his office, who was familiar with the case, filed the papers Tuesday afternoon and intimated that in case the matter goes to trial that Wallace would show that the Oregon Engineering & Construction company put on unreasonable restrictions in order to force Wallace to break the contract. When the local firm saw that the pipe could be laid for 6 cents a foot, plans were made immediately to take the work away from Wallace so that the Oregon Engineering & Construction company could save this fat profit, the clerk said.

Nether Charles Parker or J. A. Moffatt, of the Oregon Engineering & Construction company, were worried Tuesday night when told of the suit and said that Wallace's case would not last long when taken to court. Wallace is not even a contractor, but an attorney, they said, and Engineer Rands and the water commission prevented them from carrying out the contract with Wallace, they stated. A clause in the contract between the South Fork commission and the Oregon Engineering & Construction company provides that all sub-contracts must be approved by the commission and its engineer. The fact that the engineer did not approve the contract takes the responsibility from their shoulders, the contractors say.

Several merchants were said to have assigned claims to Ellis Hughes, raising the total amount alleged to be due to about $900. Paul Fisher and O. W. Eastman represented the plaintiff and J. E. Hedges, the defendant.
