ESTACADA FAIR WILL BE HELD NEXT MONTH

PLAYSHED ON SCHOOL GROUNDS TO HOLD MAIN EXHIBITS—ASK FOR TROUT FRY.

ESTACADA, Ore., Aug. 6.—The 1915 East Clackamas County fair, formerly held in the park at Estacada, will this year be held on the grounds of the city schools on September 5, 9 and 10.

The main exhibits will be staged in the new outdoor playshed, a roofed building, partially enclosed, 100 feet square. Livestock and poultry exhibits will be in tents on the grounds, with the cooking, canning, milk testing and agricultural demonstrations, lectures, art and domestic science exhibits in the high school building.

The Estacada Rod & Gun club has this year asked the state fish and game commission for 500,000 rainbow and eastern trout fry for streams in this part of the county.

A serious epidemic of hemorrhagic septicemia, as the disease is diagnosed by State Veterinarian Lytle, is found in dairy herds in the country tributary to Estacada.

For the pleasure of Miss Bentley a delightful auto trip was taken to Multnomah falls on Thursday last.

An ideal day gave the party a fine view of the country and scenery which is particularly beautiful near Chanticleer Inn, Crown Point, Chale Falls and Latourelle falls.

Owing to the hard surfacing of the Columbia highway the party were unable to go on to Mt. Hood. Luncheon was spread near Multnomah falls and after returning to the city a trip was taken up the Fairmount boulevard, which proved an excellent scenic drive of one hour from the city of Portland.

The first view is to the west and south, the Tualatin valley's broad acres with various colored fields bordered by the coast mountains, looking over the summit of Mt. Transylvania and Mount Chehalis it appeared as if the coast and Cascade range had joined each other in a great arc, their forest summits appearing through the haze in the distance, and 1000 feet down in the valley below are diminutive moving objects which are interurban trains or farmers and their teams working in the fields.

And 15 miles to the south-east we see Oregon City, cuddled against the hillside. A P. Morse, Mrs. Hugh Roberts, Hal Roberts, Nettie Bentley, Mrs. Harry Hayles and Miss Scripture enjoyed the trip. Miss Bentley departing on Friday for Tacoma where she will spend some time with friends enroute to her home in Iowa.

FARMING

(Oregon City and Clackamas County Publicity.)

There is no life as free and independent as farm life—providing system and intelligent judgment go into the making of it. There are opportunities for the live agriculturist. He finds conditions that require intelligent management to render his particular kind of farming profitable and herein lies his chance. There is nothing of monotony in farm life if the farmer has the intelligence and the initiative to meet the needs of his particular farm and market.

envy him, and in this day of automobiles, telephones, rural mail service, and scientific home making, more of modern advantages than the man who spends hours in office and store, and who lives in a city apartment.

Poultry. Yes, poultry does pay even with our yellow brothers from over the sea sending their little brown eggs to us.

The farmer who raises his own grain, and only has poultry as a side line, finds, if he has a strain of hens bred for their laying qualities, that his poultry nets him a nice little sum during the year. The hens should be housed in building that are draught proof, but by all means with open fronts, should be given an ordinary degree of attention in the matter of proper food, always with an eye to plenty of succulent green feed, their houses kept clean and free from vermin.

Houses may be built so that the work of cleaning is reduced to the minimum. The mild winters of Clackamas County are especially hospitable to poultry, and there are no excessively cold spells to reduce the vitality of the hens. There is always green feed available.

Kale, cabbage and cauliflower leaves may be placed in the pens if it is necessary to keep the hens up or they will browse on the lawn, or about the farm, eagerly gobbling up all the larvae and worms they can scratch out. In the orchard they hunt out many a hibernating pest, and dispatch it with great gusto, thereby in one bite, removing a possible family of some millions.

The secret of success lies in securing a laying strain, and with the lay bone test, weed out the star boarders who cut down the average of the willing workers. The writer had six pullets and a hen that average 23 4-10 eggs apiece each month during the months of January, February and March, this with ordinary care. They were given free range, comfortable open front house, and a small quantity of animal matter in their not too heavy rations. On a farm with the same strain, a large number of fowls would average just as well. It is what the hen was built to do, plus food that gives profitable results.

However hens cannot lay if they are feeding with their blood and vitality a big family of lice and mites. The only way these pests may be kept under control is by burning them out if through neglect they get a start. During a prolonged absence from home the writer's houses through neglect of caretakers became literally infested with red mites. Spraying, etc., didn't seem to check them but a determined fight with applied flames worked the trick. Fire does not seem to destroy the frost like mites, and the operation was repeated at short intervals until the last mite disappeared when the hens began to lay once more.

A regular trade in eggs may always be established direct with housewives.

To see broad fields and to know that there is not merely the drudgery of plowing and sowing and reaping in making these fields yield crops, is an inspiration to the right kind of farmer. To plan and make one year's work the foundation for work to come, to know that science is making man master, can never spell monotony.

The farmer is his own "boss," and can live a free, independent life if he wills to do so. A little head work does the job. Head work in planning crops and head work in marketing. The manufacturer doesn't expect to sell all his goods in the immediate vicinity of his manufacturing plant and he produces in sufficient quantities to supply his market in large quantities. This the farmer must do, if he can't do it individually—he must cooperate with his neighbor and produce for remote markets that need his particular variety of produce. He's bound to win, this kind of a farmer! and he and his family will enjoy more real living, more of God's fresh air and sunshine, more of the luxuries an epicure might who will also take the star boarders when the weeding process begins. Good clean, fresh eggs, nicely dressed broilers or roasters are in demand at all times, and a regular route to be supplied once or twice a week can be maintained. Parcel post facilities are becoming every day more practical, and are a factor in disposing of this branch of farm product.

There are many exclusive poultry ranches that are doing exceedingly well but to go into this work on a large scale requires a definite knowledge of poultry husbandry. With this knowledge and application the work pays handsomely, but the beginner should start slow, and learn every phase of incubating, raising and of egg producing before he branches out on a large and exclusive scale. It is a profitable business if it be regarded as a business, and is run with the same attention, care and judgment that any other business would receive.

With Portland and Oregon City as markets, Clackamas County with its balmy climate is an ideal locality for poultry raising. Chickens, ducks and geese do exceptionally well, and turkeys are successfully raised where they need not be confined to too close quarters.

The Sherwood's Commercial club's slogan committee has reported "Shout for Sherwood" as its choice for a town yell.

MARQUAM FARMER RELEASED. Henry Barth, a farmer of the Marquam district who was arrested by Sheriff Wilson Thursday morning on a charge of insanity, was released that afternoon after an examination by Dr. Strickland, who found that Barth was sane. He is 38 years old and a native of Marion county. Mrs. P. S. Adams signed the complaint.

A MERCILESS JUDGE. One Who Shows No Favor. A merciless judge is Father Time. Before him the weak and the wanting go to the wall. Only the truth can stand. For years the following statement from an Oregon City resident has withstood this sternest of all tests. Joseph McDermott, Washington St., Oregon City, says: "I was almost flat on my back with kidney and bladder trouble. I was so lame and stiff that I could hardly hobble around and it was all I could do to get up in the morning. My kidneys were irregular in action and the secretions were scanty. I used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and I soon got well." (Statement given March 29th, 1910.) INCREASED CONFIDENCE MORE THAN THREE YEARS LATER, Mr. McDermott said: "Nothing has occurred to change my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. I think more of them than ever." Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. McDermott had. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. (Adv.)
