HUSBAND WORE HIS SOCKS SEVEN WEEKS WIFE WANTS DIVORCE

AND THEN AFTER SHE DESTROYED THEM, WIFE SAYS HE PROTESTED VIOLENTLY.

Because she says her husband would wear his socks for seven weeks at a time and then persist in going around her home with his shoes off, Mrs. Elizabeth Little believes that she is entitled to a divorce from Sheridan Little and she filed a complaint in the circuit court for her by Attorney William Stone. They were married in Oregon City, November 26, 1914, and live on a farm about four miles from town.

Regarding her husband's socks, Mrs. Little says that "the odor from them was so strong that plaintiff was compelled to leave the room, when defendant removed his shoes. After much solicitation from plaintiff, defendant changed the socks, and when plaintiff destroyed the strong scented socks, defendant flew into a fit of passion, abused defendant, telling her that there was much good wear left in those socks."

When they were married, she says, he told the minister that he had no small change at the time and would send the customary fee later. After the wedding she claims, he refused to pay the parson and explained that the minister did not need the money as badly as he.

During their married life of over a year, she says her husband gave her only $10 and of that sum she was compelled to pay a dentist's bill and subscribe to a daily paper. She was forced to give up writing to Portland friends as her husband said postage stamps cost too much.

Mrs. Little asks for a one-third interest in their $10,000 farm near Oregon City and that her maiden name, Elizabeth Norman, be restored. She asks for $200 attorney's fees.
