ANDREW LINQUIST IS DEAD FROM GASOLINE BURNS ON SATURDAY

DEATH COMES AFTER 36 HOURS OF SUFFERING - FUNERAL SET FOR WEDNESDAY.

From the results of burns from an explosion of gasoline, with which he was cleaning a pair of skates Saturday DECISION REACHED AFTER LONG afternoon, Andred Linguist Jr., the Hyear-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Linguist, of Willamette, died Monday morning. Death came after 16 hours of suffering.

Young Linquist and several comanions were cleaning skates in the Willamette fire hall, which had re cently been converted into a skating rink. They were using gasoline and some of the liquid spilled on the floor. One of the boys lighted a match to burn it off, when the gas in the pan ignited. In their efforts to put out the fire, the pan was upset and the burning liquid was splashed on Linquist.

A mass of flames, Leroy Allen, who also received some of the burning fluid, rushed outside but smothered the flames. Linguist, who was younger, was unable to help himself and by the time assistance reached him, he had been bardly burned. He was taken to Tolla will not be charged, at least to the home of H. SUNDAY CLOSING KILLED IN COURT

PHRASE "LORD'S DAY" IN LAW IS HELD SECTARIAN BY PORTLANDERS.

STUDY OF PREYIOUS RULINGS

Prediction is That Judge Gantenbein Will Find for Defendant in Portland Today-Appeal, However, is Certain.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 5 .- The Sunday closing law may be knocked in the head today because it refers to Sunday as "Lord's day."

Lawyers and court house attaches who have investigated court decisions in connection with Oregon's blue law predicted today that Circuit Judge Gantenbein tomorrow will dewide that Dan Kellaher cannot be punlahed for keeping his grocery store open on Sunday. In that case the court order restraining officers from enforcing the law will be continued until the supreme court has a chance to pass

"Lord's day" is a sectarian phrase. Judge Gantenbein himself made the ruling about seven years ago in connection with this same law, and his decision was never appealed. The supreme court has never passed on it.

Intense interest has been manifested in the hering tomorrow before Judge Gantenbein. If Dan Kellaher is convicted, he will appeal. If the law is declared unconstitutional and he is released, an appeal will be taken by the Retail Grocers' association, which is backing the prosecution.
