EDUCATION FOR DEVELOPMENT

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Education may be divided into three grand divisions: First, a school train ing in the so-called three R's. This is fundamental, and, without it, further education is impossible. Secondis given in our high schools, colleges, and other institutions of learning which do not specifically prepare one for his vocation. Thirdly, education iaw, and technical schools. In this article I shall confine myself to the second class, that of education which stands between fundamental and vocational training.

Authorities are divided. Some over-directly bearing upon one's selected calling, like that given by the medical, practical men claim that this cultural education is not necessary, and that the boy should jump immediately from the fundamentals into a training which would directly assist him in the work of his life; other educational experts strongly advocate a liberal education, like that given in our colleges, asserting that it will broaden the mind and fit it better to grasp the requirements of the future. These latter authorities do not object to the technical training, but they would have the young man ground himself in general culture, if I may put it that way, before he obtains a vocational training, or during the time in which he is obtaining it.

Many of the colleges are following out this idea, and adapting their curricula to it, allowing the student to study general subjects while he is taking up one or more directly in the line of his future work.

It has been said that one cannot be too broadly educated. This is true, provided this education can be obtained without too great a sacrifice.

If a boy is going to enter a business where he cannot directly use the classics or other cultural subjects, and cannot obtain a knowledge of them except at enormous sacrifice, I advise him to forego a college education; but, if he is in a position to become liberally educated, irrespective of his coming calling, I suggest for him a university course, or any other form of broad education, which will undoubtedly better fit his mind to absorb the technique of his trade.

If, however, one is to enter a profession, this general broad education will be found of direct value to him. although he may not use all of it. His mind then becomes his working tools, and it should be trained along the broadest and most liberal lines, a training which is not as necessary if one is to enter business.

In summing up, I would say: Get all the education you can, cultural and otherwise, provided you can do so without injury to your health or to that you cannot well afford the time, self-supporting at an early age, I would su test that you forego much of this education, which otherwise I would advise you to obtain.

When in doubt, get more education than you think you need, rather than less. It is simply a question of whether you can afford to pay the price.

Place in Most of the Homes of the Country.

The sale of household and kitchen utensils is subject to all sorts of chances and changes from the fluctuations in public taste and the march of improvement. Wood bowls and mincing knives were once staples, but the invention of food choppers has seriously diminished their usefulness. The growing popularity of aluminum utensils has had some setback because housekeepers find the metal harder to keep clean and bright than enamel ware.

The old-fashioned castiron pots, skillets and frying pans are out of date save in remote country districts, and have given place to wrought-steel utensils, much lighter and more lasting. Every modern kitchen has likewise up-to-date small conveniences, such as mechanical lighters in place of matches, asbestos mats to keep things not, soap containers for dish washing, cool handled stove lifters, and the like. One of the great changes vacuum cleaner, taking the place of the carpet beater, and saving all this run and needs only to be attached to the electric righting plug.

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.-The Progres sive party will hold its national convention on June 7, in Chicago, concurrently with the national convention of the Republican party, in the hope that both may agree on the same candidate for president.

This action was decided on today by the national committee of the Progressive party. Forty-seven of the 48 states were represented at the meet-

Progressive leaders declared that there would be no amalgamation with the Republican party, even in the event that both parties chose the same presidential candidate. The Progress sive party plans to nominate a natioual ticket at its convention in June.

Many of the party leaders declared that if the Republicans would nominate Colonel Roosevelt or any other man who is regarded as unobjectionable, and would incorporate in their platform the salient features of the Progressive principles, both parties rould unite on the same candidate in Chicago next June.

William Plinn, the committeeman from Pennsylvania, pleaded for the date finally chosen, saving he wanted the two parties to have an opportunity to get together on a candidate. H. W. Coe, of Oregon, said that the convention should be held before the Republican convention. "We ought to nominate Theodore Roosevelt and Hiram Johnson and let them go to it," he said.
