BOOK ON WALNUT CULTURE IN OREGON
The Southern Pacific has recently issued a handsomely illustrated book "Oregon Walnuts." The text was written by C. I. Lewis, chief, division of horticulture, Oregon Agricultural college, Corvallis, Oregon. The cover plate shows a collection of Oregon walnuts in natural colors. The interior pictures are taken from various walnut orchards throughout western Oregon, and shows in addition to general views technical illustrations of grafting, pruning, budding, etc. Prof. Lewis has covered the walnut industry very thoroughly in this book, and it should be in the hands of every walnut grower in this state. He treats first of the consumption of walnuts in the United States, and calls attention to the fact that there were imported into the United States last year over thirty million pounds of walnuts. Although Oregon produces but a small proportion of the walnuts grown in this country, nevertheless over one-fourth of the young non-bearing walnut trees of the United States are right here in Oregon.

WANTS COURT TO COMPEL HUSBAND TO CONVEY PROPERTY SHE CLAIMS IS HER.
Sadie F. Finley and F. B. Finley were man and wife and also business partners in taxidermy for some years at 249 Columbia street, Portland. She finally dissolved business relations with him and Tuesday in the circuit court she filed suit to force him to convey certain property she claims were secured title to without her knowledge and which he has held since their separation. The double and unique union of the couple is out of the ordinary, according to the complaint. She says that before they married, she loaned him money. After marriage she loaned him more, making in all $150. Their home was in rooms adjoining the shop. She alleges that she attended to all the household duties and then clerked in their store between times, thus saving the hire of another. They bought a piece of property for $100. He agreed to vest title in her, she alleges, because of her loan and the further agreement whereby she was to receive a credit of $10 a week for further service, which amount should be paid on the property out of receipts of the business, until the entire amount had been discharged. She charges that when this was done he had the property conveyed to him without her knowledge and has refused to reconvey it to her. She asks that the court compel him to deed it to her under the agreement.

IS INSPECTED BY U. S. ARMY OFFICER
OREGON CITY'S SHOWS UP WELL AND MAKES IMPRESSION BY ITS ESPRIT DE CORPS.
Forty-two of the 47 enlisted men of Company G, Third Regiment of Infantry, Oregon National Guard, turned out for the annual federal inspection at the armory Wednesday night, and were put through their paces by Captain Eldon Blanchard and Lieutenants W. R. Logus and K. C. Blanchard, under the watchful eyes of Lieut. Williams, U. S. Army, who has been detailed by the United States government as inspector-instructor of the National Guard. Colonel McLoughlin, commanding the Third regiment, was present and took an active interest in the inspection. For nearly two hours the men drilled by company and by squads. They marched and counter-marched, laid flat on their stomachs and crawled the length of the big armory on an imitation skirmish line. They loaded and fired at will at an imaginary enemy. They flashed finger signals back and forth from company commander to non-coms. They divided into little five and six men squads, with a corporal at their head, and went through intricate evolutions with ease. Meanwhile Lieutenant Williams made an occasional note and finally turned to Captain Blanchard with: "That will do!" The report of the inspector will be sent to Washington, along with other reports on the various companies of the Third regiment and in due time the government will issue a book, rating the companies. Last year the Oregon City company was marked "poor," and was the only company in the entire regiment to be so branded. Captain Blanchard was exceedingly well pleased with the number of men in line for the inspection. He expressed regret over the fact that only four Oregon City citizens were present to witness the affair, after a general invitation had been extended. He said at the close of the inspection that five new recruits had been secured since the agitation for more enlistments had been started, and that the company stood to lose an income of about $70 a month which had been subscribed by the local business men until 15 additional enlistments were obtained by April 1 next.
