'You Will Find My Body In The River' Says Note in Bottle

A mysterious note found in a bottle floating in the Willamette river at the foot of Hoyt street, Portland, may lead to a solution of the problem connected with the disappearance of Peter Zimmerman, June 26.

The note reads, "Parkplace, June 26, 1916. I have shot myself. You will find my body in the Willamette at Jennings boathouse." It was not signed.

The note was written on an election card of O. W. Eastham, candidate for the Republican nomination for district attorney at the primaries in May. The bottle was found by Mrs. Archie McKenzie, of Jennings Lodge, wife of a fireman on the Portland fireboat, George W. Williams.

Zimmerman, a middle-aged farmer, left his home June 26, and has not been heard of since. He was seen in Oregon City on the day he disappeared by a friend, supporting the theory that he went to Parkplace, wrote the note and then went to the river bank near Jennings Lodge and took his life.

Mrs. McKenzie turned the mysterious note over to the Portland police and Detective Thackberry was assigned to the case. He immediately communicated with Sheriff Wilson. Mrs. Zimmerman notified the sheriff's office here of the disappearance of her husband last Saturday.

The note will probably be taken to Mrs. Zimmerman to see if she can identify the writing as that of her husband today or tomorrow.

Sheriff Wilson believes that the note may have been written by Zimmerman, but that the farmer may have taken his life, but he thinks it more likely that the message was written as a joke. In the meantime Portland police and the local authorities are attempting to solve the two mysteries—the disappearance of Zimmerman and the authorship of the note—which are strangely connected.
