AMAN MOORE'S ACTION MEETS OPPOSITION AMONG DIRECTORS

Files of Company Are Copied and Information Secured, Declared Valuable by Attorney.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 9.—In answer to four motions filed in the United States district court today challenging the authority of Coy Burnett and the legal firm of Logan & Smith to represent the Oregon Portland Cement company in the so-called cement trust suit.

Although the suit was filed against the alleged trust manipulators by Aman Moore, one of the vice-presidents of the Oregon Portland Cement company, in the name of the company, it has developed that a majority of the board of directors, as well as a majority of the executive committee, are not in favor of the action which names some of them as defendants.

It also appears that on Friday afternoon Attorney Burnett, accompanied by Aman Moore, under the authority of vice-president of the company, went to the offices of the Oregon Portland Cement company in the Wilcox building, demanded that the files of the office be placed at their disposal, and employed three stenographers in taking evidence which they purpose to use in prosecuting their case against some of the officials of that company as well as against various cement companies of the west which are alleged to be in combination.

The four motions filed in the case today were entered by the Pacific Portland Cement company, of San Francisco, and the Washington Portland Cement company, of Seattle, defendants in the action. Each of the defendant companies filed a motion asking that the action be stayed and another that it be dismissed.

All of these motions were based on the ground that the Oregon Portland Cement company did not give authority to bring the action. This contention is supported by an affidavit signed by George Macdonald, secretary of the Oregon Portland Cement company.

WESTERN CATTLE DIE FROM EATING LARKSPUR

GOVERNMENT STUDIES HEAVY LOSS OF LIVESTOCK IN COAST STATES.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Larkspur poisoning has been found, in an exhaustive study conducted by the United States department of agriculture, to be, with the exception of loco poisoning, the greatest cause of loss in western cattle herds. Losses, it is said, are reported from all the mountain regions between Mexico and Canada and the Rocky mountains on the east to the west.

The recent experiments conducted by the department, a report of which is published in Professional Paper No. 365, indicate that the various species of larkspurs are poisonous to cattle and horses, but not to sheep. Except under unusual circumstances, however, horses do not eat enough of the plant to produce any ill effects. From a practical standpoint, therefore, it may be said that larkspur affects cattle only. It was also found that a quantity of the weed equal to at least 3 per cent of the weight of the animal was necessary to produce poisoning.

In the opinion of the investigators, the fact that sheep may be apparently able to feed upon larkspurs with entire impunity may be utilized in some cases to protect the cattle. Where larkspur is especially abundant, the paper already mentioned says it is desirable to use the range for sheep rather than for cattle or to combine sheep grazing and cattle grazing in such a manner that the areas infested with larkspur shall be first eaten down by the sheep. On comparatively limited areas it may be possible to dig up the tall larkspur, but this is frequently too costly a measure to be adopted and, furthermore, it is rarely possible to eradicate completely the poisonous weed.

Generally speaking, there are two great groups of larkspurs, the tall and the low. The low disappear from the range early in July and cases of poisoning from them are usually confined to the months of May and June. The tall larkspurs live through the summer season, making their first appearance in early spring. This is the time in which they are the most poisonous. After blossoming, their poisonous character appears to diminish. Ultimately, it disappears and the plant dries up although the seeds remain poisonous. In Colorado, most of the cases of poisoning from the tall larkspur occur in May and June, with sporadic cases in July. In other localities, however, the larkspurs blossom later and poisoning may occur as late as August or even September.

On the range the first evidence that the animal has been poisoned is frequently afforded by its falling down. After a short interval it will probably regain its feet only to fall again. As the effect of the poison wears off, the animal is able to keep its feet for longer and longer periods, and finally walks off very much as if nothing had happened. In severer cases it is ultimately unable to regain its feet at all and dies. Government experiments indicate that beneficial results may be obtained by treating the poisoned animals with hypodermic injections of physostigmin salicylate, pilocarpin hydrochlorid, and strychnin sulphate. If necessary, these treatments may be followed by hypodermic injections of whiskey.

BIENNIAL REPORT OF COUNTY SCHOOL HEAD ENCOURAGING IN TONE

PROGRESS OF HIGH SCHOOLS IS CONSIDERED FEATURE OF LAST TWO YEARS.

The last year has been a year of progress, a year of unequalled advancement for the 125 schools of Clackamas county, according to the biennial report of County School Superintendent Calavan, which was completed on Tuesday.

Every line of school work has been bettered. Improvements have been made in buildings, courses have been bettered, greater interest aroused in school affairs and better work accomplished. Principal among the improvements noted by the county school superintendent is the betterment of the high schools of the county.

During the past 15 months, eight four year high schools have met all the requirements of the state department for standard schools, the report reads. "The one potent factor that has done so much to bring about this high standard, is the non-resident high school tuition law. This statute, in my judgment, is the greatest piece of constructive legislation ever passed by the state legislature. The increased attendance last year was marvelous, ranging from 33 1/3 per cent to over 100 per cent in each high school. I think fully 75 per cent of the boys and girls who graduated from the eighth grade in 1915 attended some standard high school. Not only has it caused a much better patronage, but it has practically done away with all the one-, two-, and three-room high schools which were only doing high school work after a fashion.

While our high schools have been making long strides toward betterment, the elementary schools have not been overlooked, and during the last two years these schools have raised their standard to a very noticeable degree. One factor that has helped to lift the standard is the statewide standardization plan adopted by the state department of public instruction. Under it, we have been able to cause 49 districts to meet the 12 requirements for standard schools, and many more have met nearly all the requirements, while all the rest have met some of them."

Superintendent Calavan reviews in his report the success of the county-wide spelling and arithmetic contests which he conducted last year. Industrial clubs, too, he finds have stimulated interest in school work and have given the pupils practical knowledge.

Superintendent Calavan expressed his appreciation of the work done by School Supervisor Vedder and by N. C. Maris, of the state department of public instruction, and H. C. Seymour and Miss Helen Cowgill, of the Oregon Agriculture college.

CLEAN UP SCHOOL, IS J. E. CALAVAN'S ADVICE

INSTRUCTIONS TO SCHOOL DIRECTORS SENT OUT BY COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT.

Advice and caution to the boards of directors of the 25 school districts in Clackamas county are contained in letters sent out Friday by County School Superintendent Calavan. Clean up the school, make certain of the purity of the water supply, see to it that the stove or heating plant is in good working order—these are the high points of the superintendent's letter.

The body of Superintendent Calavan's letter follows: "The health of the pupils demands that the schoolrooms be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected before school opens. Floors should be cleaned and oiled, never painted. For this, use floor dressing, not linseed oil. For the furniture, nothing is better than a coat of varnish.

"The water supply, no matter what the source may be, should be made absolutely sanitary. Many school wells are unused during the summer, and are not fit for school use until carefully cleaned.

"Outbuildings should be examined, and needed repairs made. Contaminated screens be built before the entrances to these buildings, and that all manure be removed.

"If your school building is not properly lighted, we shall be pleased to discuss the subject with you, in regard to making proper changes.

"If you have not installed a heating plant, or if your stove is in, or near, the center of the room, this is a subject that demands attention. Heating plants, or stoves, should be placed in one corner in the back of the room, never in front near the teacher's desk. It may be necessary to move the chimney in order to meet this requirement. If a stove is used, it should be provided with a jacket extending a few inches above the stove and should reach within about six inches of the floor. Where stoves are used, window boards are absolutely necessary to insure good ventilation.

"School grounds should be clean and free from rubbish.

"A goodly number of our schools have met the state standardization requirements, and a number of others are about ready to become standard. See to it that your school ranks with the best in the county."

FATHER'S LIFE SAVED ONLY BY WOMEN'S BLOOD

DAUGHTERS SACRIFICE EIGHT PINTS OF RED FLUID SO AGED PARENT MAY LIVE.

TUALATIN PIONEER IS VICTIM OF RARE MALADY, SAY DOCTORS

Devotion of Sick Man's Children is Shown by Their Willingness to Give Body Fluid to Refresh Patient's Wasted System.

Only the sacrifice of their own blood by his two daughters is keeping George Galbreath, of the Tualatin district, alive. Mr. Galbreath, a pioneer of 1852, is 70 years old, and presents one of the most interesting medical problems that local physicians have had to deal with for some time. Fortunately for him his children are more than willing to let him gain renewed strength through their blood, as were it not for this his days would be numbered and very few.

Mr. Galbreath is suffering from what is known as pernicious anemia, a disease in which the blood corpuscles are unable to rebuild themselves sufficiently fast to offset the destruction of blood cells by the daily functions of the body. In most cases the victim of the malady slowly wastes away, and death usually comes after the disease has run for about two years.

For many weeks, now, Mr. Galbreath has made regular trips to the Oregon City hospital to receive transfusions of blood from his two daughters. Each trip he receives a pint of blood, the daughters alternating in their trips with him to Oregon City. He has been given eight transfusions during this summer.

As long as Mr. Galbreath receives blood from his daughters, attending physicians say he will gain strength, providing, of course, that no other disease develops. But if the treatment stops, that quality of the body which destroys blood will soon be tearing down blood cells faster than the body can build them up, and the aged man will begin to go down hill again.

Transfusion of blood is a simple operation. A vein of the person to give the blood is tapped and a bottle filled with blood. Then the vein of the patient is opened and the blood allowed to flow slowly into the sick person's system. This simple and effective plan is considered far better than the old method of actually connecting the arteries of the well with the sick person. Under the old plan, there was no way to tell how much blood was transfused, and the person giving the blood was in actual danger of bleeding to death.
