FOREIGNERS PLEDGE ALLIEGENCE TO THE UNITED STATES

Six men of foreign birth have shown their loyalty to the United States this week by filing petitions for final naturalization papers in the Clackamas County Circuit Court. The rush for naturalization has been on ever since the international crisis, and Deputy County Clerk Miller says 29 foreign born men have already filed petitions to be naturalized at the naturalization court sessions on June and August 6.

Frank Yare, an Austrian-born laborer, who filed petition for final papers Thursday, came to America from Bremen, Germany, in 1909, on the German steamer Kronprinzessin Cecilie, since interned in an American port and dismantled by her own crew. Others are: Urieh Brugger, 611 Washington street, Oregon City, a French dairyman; Alexander Hugh McDonald, 293 Seventeenth street, Oregon City, an English machine tender; Jacob Weidner, a German farmer. John Tocklenburg, of New Era; and John Galer, of Needy, Oregon.

SOCIETY MAN IN ARMY MISSED BY LOCAL OPERA

Two of Oregon City's most popular young men have enlisted with Company G, now stationed at Vancouver Barracks under command of Captain Blanchard, of Oregon City. These young men are Kent Moody, only child of Mrs. H. S. Moody, of Ninth and Railroad avenues, and Dallas (Curly) Armstrong, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Armstrong, of Ninth and Main streets. These young men were among the most patriotic in the city, and both gave up good positions with the Miller-Parker company. Their employers have assured the young men that their positions will be open to them when they return. Moody was recently appointed by the Miller-Parker company as automobile salesman, and Armstrong was employed in the mechanical department, while W. R. Logus, who was general sales manager of this company when he was called to Vancouver Barracks with his company, was a few days ago appointed to captaincy. He is an uncle of Moody.

Moody has "fighting blood" in him, as his grandfather, Henry H. Moody, of Pulaski, Oswego county, New York, fought in the Civil war, and his great-grandfather Moody was also a soldier. He was anxious to become a member of Company G, when that company left for the Mexican border. When the United States severed diplomatic relations with Germany, and the enlisting of men commenced, his patriotism was again aroused. Being the only child, Moody realized what a sacrifice it would be for his mother to allow him to enter the service of Uncle Sam, and when she finally consented he exclaimed, "Mother, I am proud of you, and you can now hold up your head and know that you have a son ready to fight for his country."

Armstrong and Moody were given a hearty welcome by Captain Blanchard, who said to them, "Boys, I am proud of you, and glad you are with my company."

Armstrong, who took a prominent part in the Civil war drama given at the Shively opera house Tuesday evening for the benefit of the Oregon City library and Young People's institute, was allowed to return home for that evening to take part. He was one of the star actors, but it was necessary to "call off" the second performance, scheduled for tonight, owing to his absence. Several others in the cast will enlist today.
