

Newsy Briefs From All Over the County

Macksburg

MACKSBURG, Ore., Aug. 2.—Although it was thought, a week ago, that our crops could not withstand many days more of drouth, today finds them looking quite as well as they did with a visible advance in growth. Corn and beans are growing finely, and so far show none of the yellow leaves that always betoken injury from lack of rain. Potatoes are growing steadily and though less rapidly than in former seasons, are free from destructive pests. The hay is all stored and has been an exceptionally heavy crop. Fruit is ripening fast, and is of especially fine quality. While some of the trees are yielding smaller quantities than usual others are so full as to require support to avoid the breaking down of limbs. The cattle are thriving on the grass near the river bank, which is still fresh and green; hence the dairy output does not as yet show any sign of diminution for lack of rain. The weather, if we are wise enough not to worry over the drouth, is perfect. There is an almost constant breeze. The sunshine is no hotter than vegetation requires, and the nights invite the refreshing sleep.

The sunrise and the sunset, unshadowed by clouds, are such as artists adore, the sky exhibiting a splendor beyond the power of tongue or pen to convey.

Out-of-door sleepers, and such there are in almost every home in our community, may see the morning star fade away in the gradually increasing light and through the crimson streak of dawn growing broader and broader till it has merged into the great sun. He who, through so many months of the year must look on a clouded sky, may well enjoy its clear refugeance while it lasts. We know, full well, that it can not be for long. The wild birds and flowers still continue to charm us. Roses, though not so numerous, are as lovely as in June. The aquatic fowls are thriving on the running streams and all others do better than in the rainy time, which is always a drawback to poultry. In short, if we look at all the advantages the dry weather brings with it, we may enjoy every day of it. It certainly has an important element for appreciation. It must be brief.

TEN TOWNS ARE TAKEN BY PETAIN WITH HAIG

AT THE BRITISH FRONT, July 31. A vast British force, augmented by French troops, at dawn today launched against the army of Crown Prince Rupprecht, of Bavaria, between Dixmude on the north and Gapaard, near Warneton, on the south, a terrific offensive, which, according to the early reports, had carried the onrushing allies well beyond the shell-shattered front line trenches of the Germans throughout this approximately 20 mile front, and in many places had reached the second line defenses.

Both the French and British had achieved all the first objectives, and the artillery was moving forward with schedule precision, and the whole situation was satisfactory in every particular.

In numerous places the entente allies encountered strong resistance and counter-attacks from the desperate Teutons.

Between Dixmude and Boesinghe the attacking forces are reported to have obtained the first two lines of the German trenches, after having fought over the most difficult terrain imaginable, due to marshes and inundated areas, with which the section is blocked.

The Germans' front line about the Ypres salient, which had been held unquestioned by the enemy since the early days of the war, offered little resistance today to the British advance but beyond those trenches the Germans made a firm stand in an endeavor to stem the onslaught.

The British again captured La Basseeville, on the Franco-Belgian frontier, which, a few days ago, they had occupied and then relinquished. The Germans made a heavy counter-attack here in an attempt to regain the position, but the British flung them off and began consolidating the ground won.

The offensive launched this morning by General Sir Douglas Haig, the British commander, in conjunction with General Petain, the commander of the French forces, against the German lines on the Belgian front, is the culmination of tremendous gun bombardment which has been in progress almost continuously in this area for a week.

The intensity of the artillery drum-fire with which the entente allies had been demolishing the Teuton trenches, preparatory to today's assault, has been described by the German general staff as the greatest in the history of warfare, even surpassing the terrific fire maintained at the beginning of the Somme and Arras offensives.

The battle front north of the River Lys stretches from Warneton, on the Franco-Belgian border, to the North Sea coast, the distance between those two points being about 26 miles.

Included in this battle area is the famous Wytschaete-Messines front, where the British, on June 7, after exploding 1,000,000 pounds of high explosives under the German lines, attacked on a nine-mile front, and captured the high ridge, several towns, 47 heavy guns, and more than 7000 prisoners.

The entente allies are facing a large concentration of German fresh groups of men which were rushed up as soon as it became apparent sometime ago that an offensive was contemplated in this region. In the last few days Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, has replaced many of his old divisions with fresh troops and others are being held in reserve.

French troops, cooperating with the British, crossed the Ypres-Lille canal and swarmed over the enemy's first and second lines.

Meanwhile British Tommies struck savagely and successfully, driving the foe back.

The British force captured La Basseeville in the first dash.

All counter attacks were repulsed here, as well as elsewhere.

This afternoon the victorious troops were consolidating their new gains.

La Basseeville is located on the River Lys, a little less than three miles southeast of Warneton and about three and a half miles north of Armentieres. From there authoritative reports last week placed the British lines, the capture of La Basseeville appears to indicate an advance of at least half a mile.
