A LETTER TO SAMMIE.

(May be sung to the air-THE CROWNING DAY

Dear Brother Sam, our Soldier, The home-fire's burning bright, As we sit and knit together, and talk of you tonight. Dear Father in his old chair, has nodded off to sleep, And is dreaming of his soldier, o'er the deep.

Oh, the day of triumph's coming, bye and bye, When our soldiers gone to battle, shall march home with banness the glorious sight will gladden, a ransomed world, set free,

By the noble boys who've championed Liberty. The room grows very quiet, a knitted sock is done. The thot of winter trenches is speeding every one.

While fingers fly, we're praying that God will bless you, dear,

And we dare not think how much we miss-you here.

We're proud of you, dear Brother; your picture came today, And is so much admired, you'd blush to hear the things we say. The children loved and kissed it,—Louise, and Ted and Floy. While our Mother, dewy-eyed, cried, "Bless the Boy!"

We've sent you lots of things, Sam, but you say that you like best Home letters-I'll write often, dear, and so will all the rest. We know you will be faithful, and serve the Flag, alway. Write soon. All send love and kisses,
