

MEN WHO CANNOT FIGHT AT THE FRONT IN FRANCE CAN STILL DO THEIR BIT IN FORESTRY UNITS

Even if a man cannot fight there is still plenty of opportunity for him to do "his bit" for his country in France. The work of obtaining a sufficient quantity of timber for the western front is a very big one and employs a large number of men. The timber is used for a great many purposes in the trenches, for making bridge parts and bridges and roofs of dugouts, roads, bridges, etc., etc.

These forestry units consist entirely of men who have been accustomed to forestry work and they get very little military training. In fact, they are working on lines of employment to the similar Canadian lumber camps. Men from 18 to 56 years are taken by the British and Canadian armies and the same standard of physical fitness is not required for these units. It practically means that any man who is fit to work at his job is taken. This provides an opportunity for men who are over age or are not fit enough to go overseas to fight, to engage in forestry work in France. If a man can handle an axe or a saw or has any knowledge of the work he will be taken.

British Society Woman Goes into the Movies

Hon. Mrs. William de la Poer Beresford, whose husband has gone to the war, was discovered by the World Film Company the other day in its studio at work with a picture to be known as the "Cross Bearer." There she had been plain Mrs. Beresford, and no one had paid great attention to her. When it became known she was a sister-in-law of Sir Charles Beresford and of Lord Decies, who married Vivian Gould, granddaughter of Jay Gould, the movie people became interested. Mrs. Beresford was Miss Florence Miller of Providence before her marriage.
