"Tenant in apartment Four D, Marbridge court," whispered vociferous Nathan, the young man who worked the switchboard at Curtis & Carter's real estate offices. The young man listened to the voice on the tele phone, then turning to the young Mr. Carter, he said: "She wants to talk to one of the firm. Kind o' mad, I should say. Want to talk to her, Mr. Carter?"

"What's she like?" queried the youngest member of the firm. "Sounds like a cranky old school ma'am. She's awful mad-"

"Oh, well, I might as well talk to her. I'll kid her a little, and maybe that will keep her quiet," and still turning over the papers on his desk, with his right hand, Mr. Carter reached out with his left hand to take the receiver off its hook on his desk phone while the operator connected him with the tenant in apartment Four D.

"So you're pretty cold. Well, now-I didn't catch the name-Miss Crosby -I certainly am sorry. But you'll have to see Mr. Hoover about that. Now, you don't think we're keeping that apartment cold just to make you mad. No, honest, there isn't any way we can get more coal. What-the theaters get coal enough. Well, that's a good one. All you can do, then, is to go to a show. It's matinee day. Now, really, I didn't mean to make you angry. But you see, everyone is kicking, and it really isn't our fault: We can't get any more coal and all we can do is to try and keep cheerful about it. What? You bet that it isn't so cold here in our office as it is in your apartment? Well, now, Miss Crosby, I'll have to admit that it is pretty comfortable here. We've got a southern exposure and we're on the ground floor, and somehow these office building people do manage to get the coal. Yes, it is unfair. What? Why, certainly. I'd be glad to see you. Come right along. Yes, just ask for Mr. Carter, Jr., Frank Carter. Good-by. Miss Crosby. I'll see you soon," He hung the receiver back on the hook and then clapped his hand over the ear with which he had been listening as if to relieve it from the effect of the volley fire that had been charged on it through the phone.

"Wow," he said, addressing the telephone operator on the opposite side of the room, beyond the little wooden fence. "Wow, but she certainly is some sour old maid. I thought I'd kid her into good humor, but it was the wrong tack. I wonder if she'll call my bluff and come down and see how warm we are. But say, Nathan, try to get the coal commissioner on the wire again. It's a shame to run the fires so-low. Ask them if they can't let me speak to him personally. It seems as if something ought to be done."

heard a very low but unmistakable whistle. It was Nathan's way of indicating that something worth observing was occurring in the office. There was a note of admiration in the whistle-distinctly it was his way of signaling to the other boys in the office and Mr. Carter, who was still young enough to be interested in such a signal even though he was a member of the firm-the proximity of a pretty girl.

Carter looked up from his paper, caught the direction of Nathan's gaze and then whistled an answering whistle, very low, but still audible to Nathan. It was a pretty girl and she was approaching in the vicinity of Nathan. Enveloped in a voluminous furtrimmed rough woolen coat of a dark violet hue, with her hands encased in a black must to match the fur on her coat, with a picturesque black velvet hat, cut on the poke bonnet order, that cast such shadow on her face, there was still enough opportunity to see that the girl beneath so much warmthgiving clothes was young, animated and pretty.

The bewildered Nathan looked up as she approached and to her query that Carter did not hear, he nodded to the desk of the youngest member of the firm. Then the violet coat and the delicate aroma of violet sachet that went with it moved toward the little wooden fence that hedged in Mr. Carter's desk.

"Here I am," said the girl. "I'm the tenant in Four D., Marbridge court. Where do you want me to sit-inside the fence or outside ?"

Carter jumped from his seat and was so confused that all he could say I put the valve out of commission in was: "Inside the fence-please take this chair, any chair, any chair. Yes, indeed. You-are actually Miss Crosby? How very good of you."

"No, I won't take your chair. I'll take this little one," she said, slipping out of her coat and revealing a very neatly fitted plain blue serge dress beneath. She placed the chair precisely half way between the radiator and the window where the light would come over her left shoulder. "There," she said. "I like it just like that. "Couldn't you give me a job?" Nancy Crosby put this question to Mr. Carter one day after she had been making her visits to his office for the purpose of keeping warm during the course of an entire week. "I am getting tired of knitting. One can't do that all the time. I could do copying for you and sort over papers perhaps and stick up envelopes and stamps and things."

So Mr. Carter secured a little mahogany desk, had it placed beside his own and there established Nancy Crosby as his volunteer assistant. They had finally agreed that the money that she earned as his assistant should be contributed to the Red Cross.

It was in the afternoon of that day that Mr. Carter dropped in at the Marbridge Court and getting the emergency key to apartment Four D from the janitor there let himself into the empty apartment and did a little amateur tinkering on his own account. Marbridge Court.
