LOCAL NURSE HAS THRILLING TRIP IN FRANCE

Mr. and Mrs. C. I. Stafford, of this city, are in receipt of a copy of the Jamestown Journal, published at Jamestown, New York, containing an interesting article by Captain Cottis, M. D., that is of interest to the people of Oregon City. It mentions the name of Miss Alice Stone, a Red Cross nurse at the battle front in France. Miss Stone is a former Oregon City girl, who practiced her profession as a nurse here. She is a sister of Mrs. Gertrude Lethwaite, of West Linn.

In his article he says: "We started for a certain C. C. S. a very long distance from home on Monday, May 27. The Huns started at the same time, or to be exact, about 12 hours before we did. I am not at all sure whether we or they were the more surprised when they arrived first, but I suspect that they were. In my ambulance were Miss Stone, my assistant; Miss Halcy, my assistant; Sergeant Potter, myself with the driver. We were accompanied by three other teams, Australians, Americans and South African. Two other ambulances carried the luggage.

"Nobody had the remotest idea of where we were going. The roads were very dusty, and you may realize what it is to have fifty heavy motors tearing along ahead of you to say nothing of the heavy motor transports passing in the same direction. The cars did not go slow as they do with patients, but we rolled and jerked and bumped and lurched and between time we shivered with the cold until daylight, when we stopped beside the road for breakfast.

"Immediately after breakfast, we started again and drove continuously until late in the afternoon. Many sights were seen, where devastation met our eyes. While at a farm house partaking of a breakfast the following morning we heard a few heavy explosions not far away, and reassured a couple of women who looked scared to death, by telling them that it was only French guns that they heard. The truth was that they were German shells bursting in the town, and very soon our caravan was on the move again.

"About noon, we reached D—, and stopped as usual on the outskirts for a bite of lunch, while the C. O. went in for orders. After lunch we four convoys went into town and reported for duty at a French temporary military hospital."

Miss Stone has been in France for several years, some time before the United States became involved in the war. A number of boxes containing delicacies for the injured soldiers have been sent to her from this city, and have been delivered each time according to letters received from this Red Cross nurse, and each time she has sent letters with the signatures of the injured in the hospital thanking the people of this city for the gifts and showing their appreciation.

Max, the pet fox terrier of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Woodbeck, was killed Sunday evening by a careless driver of an automobile, near their home at Rialley Station. Woodbeck, from his daily labors at the Enterprise office, and seemed to realize the time of his arrival for he would be found watching for him at the brow of the hill near the Woodbeck home. Max was particularly fond of Hershey chocolate, and was sure of getting his "handout" of this delicacy from his master twice a week.

J. Pershing is Fighter Drives Other Birds Rules Roost Himself

Many bird lovers of Clackamas county take a lively interest in the feathered tribe, building bird houses and placing water troughs where they may have fresh water during the warm days. It is surprising to note how many many birds call during the day and bath.

At one of the homes where bird houses have been hung in the trees one old mother bird has hatched out three families and indications are that there will be another family in this little bird house soon, as she is now refurbishing the nest abandoned by the young a few weeks ago.

At this same home a number of wrens have taken up their abode, but do not occupy the bird "cottages." One of these birds daily visits the cages of two canaries, where it partakes of food always left on the outside of the cage by the owner of the canaries. The latter look on interestingly at their dark brown visitor and they have become "pals."

The wren now has a sort of camouflage song, a "medley," partly that of the canaries, a meadowlark and his own. When he sings the canaries in the nearby cages try to outdo him, but this is a difficult matter.

The wren has been given the name of John Pershing, and when other birds, even the sparrows considered great fighters, make their appearance at the drinking trough or at the feeding plate "John Pershing" drives them to the trees. Even the robins that have been ruling other birds in the yard are cautious when "John Pershing" appears.
