Ben Grossenbacher, who was for four months at the Benson Polytechnic School in Portland, and for two months at Camp Pike, Arkansas, at the latter place in Infantry Officers' Training Camp, was in Oregon City Tuesday. While here he visited his friends and relatives. He says the climate of Arkansas has been ideal, but somewhat chilly in the mornings, and that the men in training have plenty of work to do. The hours they put in at the officers training camp was from 5 A. M. to 10 P. M. He says there were 10,000 training troops in camp and 75,000 men in the camp, and that influenza struck the camp some time ago, and many deaths were caused from the disease, but at the present date this seems to have been somewhat stamped out, although there are, still a few afflicted. Grossenbacher returned to Portland Sunday, having been mustered out of service December 7:

Harry Ralston McCarver, a former resident of Oregon City, but later of Portland, died suddenly at the family home at 1159 East Morrison Street, Saturday morning at 2:40 o'clock, just two weeks to the day when his mother, Mrs. Mary McCarver, of this city, passed away.

Harry Ralston McCarver was born in Oregon City, and was the son of the late Thomas J. and Mary E. Mc-Carver. He spent his boyhood days in Oregon City, attended local schools and for two years made his home in St. Joseph, Missouri, where he also attended school and graduated there. Returning to Oregon City he continued to make his home here, and later took a course in the Portland Business College, graduating from this, and later accepting a position with the Transcontinental Freight Bureau, and had been connected with that company for the past 27 years, and for 15 years has been in the office force.
