ALVIN MILLS SENDS INTERESTING RELIC.

H. Mills received in a recent letter from his son, a perfect specimen of that animal known as a "cootie." He was done up by the latest method of the taxidermist, candle grease composed with heat. This is an exceptional specimen, caught on an American soldier while in Germany. I never was bothered much by these creatures, but some of the fellows used to think 50 or 60 a day a small catch. Could give you a whole page on the history of this animal. Hope he reaches you in good shape. He tells of one of the boys in his company who went thru the war unharmed, then slipped, fell, and broke his neck at the officers mess hall, dying instantly.
