Government By the People Or Of the Courts

The opinion of Attorney General George A. Brown that Governor Olcott may hold the office of chief executive for the entire term for which the late Governor Withycombe was elected, or until January, 1923, and that the present governor may resign the office of Secretary of State and appoint his own successor to serve until January 1, 1921, will be tested in the Supreme Court.

The entire question presents a very unique and unusual situation to the people of the state, and to the mind of the ordinary layman, unaccustomed to fixing his faculties on the legal aspect alone, a peculiar phase is uppermost.

Oregon's constitution provides that the Governor and the Secretary of State, among others, shall be elected by the people. These two officials constitute a majority of the State Board of Control, a body that administers the affairs of practically every department of the state's activities. But should Mr. Brown be correct in his reasoning, and should the Supreme Court sustain his position, the state would have a Governor whom the people did not select, and a Secretary whom the people did not endorse, and these two officials would run the state, very largely.

Far be it from us, however, to anticipate the action of our highest tribunal. We assume Mr. Brown is on fairly safe ground. An attorney general does not like to have his opinions cast to the four winds. His reputation as an attorney general is at stake, to a degree. But the situation is an interesting one for the contemplation of the people as well as the lawyers.

CLACKAMAS MAN DIES FRIDAY IN CALIFORNIA

James W. Roots, for many years a resident of Boring, and one of the most widely known residents of Clackamas county, died at noon Friday, in Los Angeles, where he had been taken for the benefit of his failing health. He left Oregon City Tuesday of last week, and had been at the southern city a few days only when death came. His son, Thomas A. Roots, county roadmaster, received a telegram Friday afternoon announcing his father's death.

Mr. Roots was 69 years of age. He was heavily interested in property in Eastern Clackamas, and had been active in the local councils of the Republican party. His wife was with him at Los Angeles when the end came. The body will be brought to Oregon City for interment, and services will be held upon its arrival under the direction of the local lodge of Elks, of which deceased was a member.

In the death of James W. Roots at Los Angeles, Cal., last Friday, Clackamas county lost one of its best known residents, he having been a resident here since 1867. The body reached Oregon City Monday night and the funeral will be held here at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the Elks Temple, under the direction of Oregon City lodge, of which he was a member. The interment will be in Clackamas cemetery, under the auspices of the Odd Fellows.

Mr. Roots was born February 18, 1849, in Kent, England, and came to the United States with his parents at the age of eight years. His mother died soon after their arrival in this country and young Roots went out into the world at a tender age to carve out his own fortune and make his own way. When he was 18 years of age, Roots turned his face toward the great West and crossed the plains with a team. He located at Clackamas Station and a little later took up a donation land claim there, and lived on this until 16 years ago, when he opened a general merchandise store at Boring, where he lived until his death. He was married May 20, 1871 to Eliza A. Hickey.

For 14 years, during his residence at Clackamas, Mr. Roots was employed by the late H. L. Pittock at the Pittock paper mill on the Clackamas river, and during the high water in the winter, when it was impossible to bring paper to Oregon City for shipment by steamer to Portland, Roots would load a ton of paper on a wagon, drawn by a team of horses and drive around by Lents to Portland, with enough paper to last the Oregonian a week.

Mr. Roots is survived by his widow, who took him to Los Angeles two weeks ago, and one son, Thomas A. Roots, roadmaster of Clackamas, and two daughters, Mrs. Myrtle Telford and Mrs. Amy Morand of Boring. Another daughter, Mrs. Hattie S. Knox, died February 21, 1917. Mr. Roots was a stalwart Republican and took an active interest in politics, although he never held a public office. He was a prominent figure in convention days. Mr. Roots was a member of the Congregational church, and was an Odd Fellow and an Elk.

MILO THOMPSON DIES OF HEART TROUBLE AT LOCAL HOSPITAL

Milo Thompson, son of Mrs. Sarah Thompson of Clackamas, and of the late Alexander Thompson, died at the Oregon City hospital Thursday evening, after an illness of several weeks. His death was due to heart trouble.

Milo Thompson was born at Clackamas June 21, 1897, and was 21 years 9 months and 10 days old at the time of his death.

Mr. Thompson had resided in Clackamas during his entire life, attending the Clackamas schools, and was one of the most popular young men of that place. He has been employed as a traveling salesman during the past few years, but has retained his residence at his old home town.

Mr. Thompson's father was one of the prominent school teachers for many years of Clackamas county.

The deceased is survived by his widow and a young son, Clark, of Clackamas; his mother, Mrs. Sarah Thompson of Clackamas; a sister, Mrs. Cora Rochester of Portland.
