DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER
THE JAPANESE NIGHTINGALE.

"You're very fond of adding everything up so it will make four," she said. "Is that the number you always add to?"

"It is not," said Mr. Japanese Nightingale, proudly.

"Well, anyway, yours wrong," said Mrs. Japanese Nightingale.

"I don't see why," said Mr. Japanese Nightingale. "Why can't one add rudenesses together? Can't one add good manners as well as bad manners?"

"You don't seem to be able to do it," said Mrs. Japanese Nightingale, holding her head on one side. "The fact remains, that you can't add rudenesses as you think you can. You add two and two to make your head four."

"Not my beloved four at all!" said Mr. Japanese Nightingale. "I'm sure you're far from nice to me when you're such a handsome mate with beautiful red and orange touches to my hair, beautiful yellow dries around my eyes, a yellow-green overcoat, yellowish in front, brownish in back. It's a choice selection of shades and shadings, I am."

"And the cousins who were given to some friends of our mistress which most beautifully."

"But you don't whistle," said Mrs. Japanese Nightingale. "It doesn't do me any good to hear that your cousin whistle. So do mine, for that matter, but I'm too lazy myself. I like to be let out of my cage every morning to fly about and I like to cock my head on one side when I speak to my mistress, but I can't be bothered to whistle."

"I don't object to it though if you don't whistle, but I do object to it when you pull my tail feathers, for I consider that very rude," said Mr. Japanese Nightingale.

"I care not for your opinion," said Mrs. Japanese Nightingale, "and I have already told you that, but I will add that I am sorry I did it and never will again. I hope I am forgiven." And Mrs. Japanese Nightingale drew close to him and said that he was surely forgiven!

FAR BEYOND ALLOTTED SPAN

Instances of Remarkable Cases of Longevity Which Seem to Be Well Authenticated.

The death at Nenagh, County Tipperary, Ireland, of Mrs. Bourke, who was reported to have reached the age of 121 years, has led the London Daily Express to make a record of some of the other famous cases of longevity. In 1904 the regimental chaplain of the 18th Bengal Infantry was still continuing services in Calcutta at the age of 130. In 1908 Andrei Nikolaevich Schmidt, a Russian, produced papers which showed that he was 130 years old, and had enlisted in the Imperial army in 1798. The same year Hadji Raouf was 133, and was still earning a living as a saddle in Constantinople, but he was a juvenile companion of Qu-Ka-Nam, an Indian, who roamed the shores of Puget Sound at the age of 100. He was generally conceded by Europeans to be likely to be 200, and he claimed to remember the time when Iron was as well known to his tribe. He was 7 feet 6 inches in height and did not weigh 150 pounds. A few years ago a Chinese woman named Montreal, 80, had left her native land when 70, and was lived in Demerara for 100 years. In 1912 Europe had 7,000 living centenarians, of whom 3,888 were Bulgarians.

"I Object When You Pull My Tail Feathers."

not about adding. I care less for subtracting and as for multiplying—well, I hate it!"

"I didn't mean you were adding numbers like they do in arithmetic," said Mrs. Japanese Nightingale. "I simply meant that you were adding bad manners."

"All the same," said Mr. Japanese Nightingale. "In arithmetic they add so many numbers of this and so many numbers of that. For instance they say two nightingales added to two other nightingales make in all four nightingales."

"So you were trying to make out that instead of one rudeness I had several rudenesses added to the one, making, I suppose, four in all."

Mrs. Japanese Nightingale gave a funny little chuckle and made a funny little sound in her throat which sounded like a grunt.

J. W. Reed, of Estacada, was an Oregon City visitor, Wednesday.

WORKERS NOT ALWAYS BUSY

Bustling Individual Sometimes Is Merely Carrying Out Ideas Evolved by Apparent "Loafer."

Secretary of War Baker was defending certain army officers who had been berated as chair warmers. "Some may be," he admitted, "but in most cases I am sure you will find that the very person whose position or work seems almost a sinecure, is doing big things, while often the person who is thoughtlessly given credit is not the real worker at all. Like the secretary's stenographer.

Admiralty's Humor.

The British admiralty has a sense of humor, and occasionally displays it in official documents. An old sea captain wrote to the department complaining, more in sorrow than in anger, of the way in which his ship had been dazle-painted: "First you make me look like a parrot, and then you make me look like a haystack, and I don't want to look like either." He got back the official reply: "We don't want you to look like either a parrot or a haystack, but we do want you to look like as if your stern was where your head ought to be."

Mines Threaten Shipping.

Naval authorities say it will be several years before the waters of Europe are entirely free of floating mines. Many of the German mines destroyed by allied trawlers were found to have been moored by ropes. When the ropes rotted the mines broke from their anchorages and drifted in many cases to the main line of steam travel.

DOINGS OF THE BOY SCOUTS.

During the disastrous autumn fires in the woods of northern Minnesota and Wisconsin the boy scouts did much valuable service in fighting fire, assisting refugees and the injured, and in locating the missing.

Boy scouts in West Hartford, Conn., dammed a brook and made a swimming pond 650 feet long.

Scout Phillip Faucette from Troop No. 40, of Memphis, was asked by a frantic father to rescue his baby who was in a burning house. At great personal risk the scout entered the building and succeeded in saving the child.

POLICE CHIEF PRAISES SCOUTS.

C. C. Colquhoun, chief of police in Long Beach, Cal., answering a question as to the boy scout movement in relation to the juvenile problem in this city, states that during his four years as a police official there has not been one case of trouble caused by a scout.

"As to their help to the city," he continues, "I have used them many times to help our police department. The last four years I have used the boy scouts on the Fourth of July, using about 50 at a time, picked from the different troops; each boy is furnished a boy scout police badge. They work in pairs with a patrol leader in charge of each squad. They principally look out for fires, lost articles and lost children. One year they brought in over 60 lost children to the beach sub-station. Last year the squad patrolling the pier extinguished three small fires."

BELGIAN SCOUTS SEND CABLE.

National headquarters has received the following cablegram from the boy scouts of Belgium: "Delivered from the yoke of enemy occupation the Belgian boy scouts hasten to send to their brothers their warmest expressions of greeting. They hope that the feeling of brotherhood born on the field of battle will continue between their country and yours that the ties of friendship may become closer and closer between the scouts of your organization and the Belgian boy scouts."
