ADVENTURES OF JIMMY COON

Everybody in the great forest loved Peter Rabbit and his mother, Mrs. Mollie Cottontail; that is, everybody except a very few people like the Fox family.

Peter Rabbit and his family lived in a little house under a rock, among the willows, near Murrumbidgee Brook.

Peter Rabbit's family was a very old family and there wasn't a better family nor an older one in the whole forest.

Peter Rabbit often went hunting with Jimmy Coon and Teddy Possum. He never liked any of the things to eat that they liked but they were all great friends. When they were catching fish or hunting for birds eggs little Peter would sit near by and sometimes eat a little shoot of willow himself or take a little nap and wait until those two rascals were ready to move on.

"Teddy Possum, said Jimmy Coon, 'Isn't little Peter funny when he sits, he stands and when he runs he jumps!'

"Oh, I never noticed," said Teddy Possum, "but I do not know that on a dark night when you can't see your paw before your face you can always find Peter. That little piece of cotton, his funny little tail, twinkles about in the dark."

"You needn't make fun of Peter's tail. Yours is so long that you don't think any others count."

And sure enough Teddy Possum was swinging by his tail from the branch of tree.

"I don't wonder Teddy Possum you are so proud of that long tail. I am proud, too. Not of my tail but of my great and powerful relatives: the Bears, Cousin Bruin and his two handsome sons and all the Ursus family. They are my cousins and look just like me."

You would have laughed if you could have seen Jimmy Coon strutting along and throwing out his chest. Teddy Possum winked at little Peter Rabbit, but Peter looked just as if he wanted to cry as he wiggled his nose and dropped his long ears.

Pretty soon Jimmy Coon noticed how miserable Peter looked. He felt sorry. So he lifted up one of his long ears lined with the softest pink satin and said, "Now look here, Peter what are you proud of? Don't be scared, nobody is going to hurt you! 'I have great relatives, too. You don't know them but I have been to see them and my mother doesn't like me to be with them. They are wild and my mother says they will lead me into trouble."

"Peter, you don't say! Where do they live and what is their name?"

"They live way off in the deep woods and their name is Snow Shoe," sniffed Jimmy Coon. "The only Snow-Shoe I ever heard about is little William's and he wears it out in the winter snow. And now little Peter did begin to cry."
