

SPEAKERS FOR ROAD BONDS MAKE DATES

A ROAD DREAM

By M. J. Lee.

Editor: I read the official issue of "The Hammer," I heard of the Stark weather mud throwing speech on his own dung hill and I have heard of the big things the Patent Paving people are going to do against the bond issue.

With all this confusion on my mind I retired to my warm bed and during the course of the night I had the following dream:

The patent paving people don't like the proposed bond issue because they can't get their hooks on the money. They hired Tom Roots, canned road-master in Clackamas county, to be their official paving healer to buck the bonds. They got the first hand assistance of John Mann, Commissioner, of Portland. The Warren Construction Company rent the top floor of the Journal building so through them they get the Oregon Journal.

With this lineup they have a parley and all smoke a pipe of peace and over the tobacco jar and under a bottle of grape juice they begin to scheme. The outcome of their efforts are as follows: Harvey Starkweather, who married wealth was taken into their surroundings and offered the support of the construction companies, the patent paving companies and the Democratic gun, The Oregon Journal, for a high office. Poor Old Harvey, who has political ambitions and who has been running for office every since Heck was a pup, fell for the dope. Then the big guns of the meeting began offering plums to other men of the county in order to get them in the band wagon. But, lo and behold, no one would fall but Dedman County Commissioner and Vedder the office of County School Superintendent. Then they looked around for a county judge and that was offered to Harvey Cross, but Harvey refused to accept and line up with the crowd.

No one would take the judgeship and in order to fill up the ticket and make things appear "O. K." Tom Roots was offered the office and he accepted. The Patent Paving Combine wanted to play safe and wanted some one to be judge that they had the goods on.

After all the offices were filled the offsprings were told to hold a meeting of a picked crowd at Clackamas and start the wheels of the opposition to grinding. In order to keep control, the office prospects were unanimously elected by themselves to act. Then they proceeded to itch a thousand bucks from the poor taxpayers in the district, and Tom Roots was to get a bunch of money from "Somewhere in France." Then these men all dressed up with big corporation cigars poked into their teeth stated out to corrupt the minds of the tax payers. Tom Roots goes to Oregon City and like an old woman gets confidential with his friends and tells the whole bill of fare. He tells them that he had seen Brownell and told him that Dimick had quit, he then goes to Dimick and tells him that Brownell had quit boosting in favor of the bonds. These two loyal citizens got their heads together and compared notes. The outcome of the meeting was that Roots was branded as a pipe dreamer. Then Roots goes to a local weekly newspaper and tries to pull it, but he falls again, the newspaper telling him that they were on the fence and were in the business to sell advertising and would sell to each side. Then he goes to his banker and tells them that he had pulled another bank and wanted them to go into the opposition. His banker told Tom "nothing doing."

Tom then goes down the street and tells another personal friend that he was personally getting $250 per month for busting the bond issue and that the patent paving companies were going to spill about $5,000, including the $1,000 the poor suckers in District No. 1 had chipped in, to knock the teeth out of the bond issue.

As a last resource "Easy Money" Tom told that the "Real Road Boosters," of which he is chief organizer and chairman, had three things to do. First—Beat the bonds. Second—Get the goat of the present county court, (because they cannot him.) Third—Clip the wings of Chris Schuebel.

After all has failed Tom and Harvey arranged a meeting at Oak Grove and instead of arguing the merits of the bond issue they pick out each man interested in the welfare of the county and introduce him separately to the audience, appealing to the audience through the argument of graft, corruption, dishonesty and selfishness. Just at this point in the dream the good people began ushering in the anniversary of the Armistice by ringing bells, shooting guns and blowing whistles, and before I could finish the dream I awoke, and sat up in bed and thought, how fine it would be if the devil could get hold of that bunch and could take the minto his Hell and tie a hammer to each one and brand them for the rest of time as the official knockers for the patent paving combination for the wrong they are trying to do the farmers of my section of Clackamas county.

CENTRALIA RIOT MEN ESCAPE ON VERDICT

CENTRALIA, Wash., Nov. 12.—No names were mentioned in a verdict returned by a coroner's jury which early tonight held an inquest over the body of an alleged Industrial Worker of the World, believed by some to be "Brick" Smith, who was lynched last night after I. W. W.'s it was charged, fired upon an armistice day parade here.

The jury's verdict read in part: "We believe that deceased came to his death by gunshot wounds and by strangulation caused by persons unknown."

For a few hours tonight the body lay on the floor of the bridge near here, under which the man was lynched last night. Later it was removed to the county jail. All last night the body swung from the rope. Early today someone cut the rope, allowing the corpse to fall into the river. Later it was recovered and dragged back on the bridge. Local undertakers said they would not touch it. It is expected the coroner will dispose of it.

OLD CHECK OF SHERIFF'S OFFICE APPEARS AFTER EIGHT YEARS

Check for Forty-nine Cents Is Being Held Before Being Presented for Payment

Former Sheriff E. T. Mass who held office from 1910 to 1914, on Wednesday received a letter from Sears, Roebuck & Company of Seattle, concerning a check he gave during his term of office.

On March 29, 1911, the sheriff's office gave a check for a refund of overpayment of taxes to Andrew P. Swanson of Hubbard, in the amount of $49. For some reason the check was never signed. Just recently Mr. Swanson in ordering some goods from the Seattle house, after endorsing the check, remitted for his order, sending the old check in part payment.

On arrival in Seattle during the course of business, Sears, Roebuck deposited the check in the Dexter National Bank at Seattle. That bank cleared the check through the Bank of Oregon City. They in turn presented the check to the First National Bank upon whom the check was drawn and then it was discovered that the check had never been signed, so payment was refused and the check was returned to Seattle. The Seattle firm wrote to Mr. Mass, sending the check and asking him to remit to cover the check. Mr. Mass did so by draft. He said that the local bank still had in the neighborhood of $1.15 to the credit of the old sheriff account and that there were probably more checks still outstanding which when cashed would take up the amount.
