HENRY PETERS CAR SMASHES INTO SIGN POST AT CROSSING

CANBY, Feb. 11.—What might have been a serious accident occurred at the Molalla railway crossing on the Pacific highway Friday when an automobile driven by Henry Peters of Aurora, crashed into a railway sign post, smashing the car and throwing the occupants to the ground. Mr. Peters escaped injury, but the other members of the automobile party were not so fortunate. These were Mrs. Ed. Harnack and little daughter, Lillie, the former a sister of Mr. Peters. Mrs. Harnack received a severe scalp wound and was considerably shaken up and cut by flying glass, as was her little daughter. The two were removed to the home of Mr. Peters, where medical aid was given them, and it will be several days before they will be able to leave for their home.

RED CROSS SENDS PICTURES OF GRAVE OF SERGEANT CAUFIELD

Mr. and Mrs. David Caufield, of this city, have just received several photographs of the grave of their son, the late Waldo Emerson Caufield, a hero of the world war, who lost his life in the Battle of Argonne, France, October 2, 1918. These photographs were sent by the Red Cross Society.

The young hero lies buried with many others at Romagne. He was first buried at Chartreux, and later disinterred and removed to Romagne.

Waldo Emerson Caufield

first young men to answer his country's call, entering the service in May, 1917, and in August was assigned to the first division of the Intelligence Service. His first engagement after arriving overseas was in the battle of Cantigny, May 28, 1918, when the Americans made their first offensive and won, this being the first division, and where Sergeant Caufield won the Croix de Guerre and was cited for bravery by General Pershing. He was later in the Battle of Soissons, St. Mihiel and had started into the Argonne when he met his death with two of his companions.

Accompanying the photographs was a letter written by the Red Cross Society, and in part was as follows: "Three copies of some photograph of a soldier's grave are being sent to his next of kin or emergency address. According to the records of the address general's office, the 'Graves' Registration Service and the Red Cross are the persons entitled to receive the enclosed pictures. Neither time nor pains have been spared in our cooperative effort to insure the utmost accuracy.

"Should the pictures you are now receiving show the location of the grave to be different from the one stated in the official notice originally sent you, you are assured that this is due to the fact that a great many transfers have been made to selected cemeteries, where bodies can be more satisfactorily cared for; and that an error in the inscription on the cross or a different location of the grave concerning which you have not yet been officially notified in no way affects the identity of the dead.

"More than three prints cannot be supplied by the Red Cross, but any reliable photographer can make copies from these, which are enclosed.

"The Graves' Registration Service and the American Red Cross will be amply repaid for long months of arduous labor if you accept these photographs as a reverent tribute to the American soldier who made the supreme sacrifice.

"D. R. CASTLE, JR., Director, Department of Communication, American Red Cross.

Sergeant Caufield was born in Oregon City February 26, 1893, and had resided here all of his life except for the time spent in the service. He was one of the popular men of his division.

Lieutenant L. J. Caufield, a brother, also a former Oregon City boy, returned from France last fall and visited his brother's grave before starting homeward, placing some of the flowers that grew on French soil on the grave of the young hero.

In a separate letter came the following from the Red Cross: "The American Red Cross National Headquarters, Washington, D. C. With deep sympathy in your loss the American Red Cross sends you the photograph of the grave of this American soldier, who gave his life for his country."

LODGE OFFERS 9 AMENDMENTS TO GERMAN TREATY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Senator Lodge offered in the senate nine amendments to the Lodge reservations to the peace treaty today.

Irreconcilable Republican senators are about to concede that the senate will ratify the treaty as a result of the discussion which will begin next Monday, it was indicated today.

A canvass of the senate has shown the "bitter enders," they said "any loophole which can be squeezed through" will be used by some senators in changing front on the resolutions and ratification.

The "irreconcilables" are convinced that Senator Lodge and his supporters do not want the treaty in the presidential campaign. One of the "irreconcilables" said today that the supporters of the Lodge reservations are willing to agree to any reservation on Article X which will save their faces with the Democrats in this respect, he declared, and are visibly weakening since President Wilson's letter to Senator Hitchcock became public.

The plan of the Lodge program supporters, this senator said, is to offer proposals for compromise on Article X, so mild that if the Democrats reject them the responsibility for failure of the treaty will clearly be upon the Democrats. In that case, if the treaty does become a campaign issue, Lodge can show by the record that he did all he could without actually surrendering to agree with the Wilson forces, this senator said.

Lodge is understood to have a thorough knowledge of the situation among the Democrats, and to know in a general way at least, just how far they will go next week or later in meeting him on Article X.

JUNKER RESTAURANT AT SANDY ENTERED AND GOODS STOLEN

Clackamas county received another visit from the representatives of Robin Hood Monday night when the confectionery and restaurant of Casper Junker at Sandy was entered and robbed of 1,000 cigars, a quantity of tobacco, steaks, etc. Entrance was effected by breaking the panel of the front door. Until the night of the robbery some one had been sleeping in the store every night. Sheriff Wilson went to Sandy Tuesday and made an investigation and is now working on the case.

There will be four blocks of the bonds, the first block of $60,000, due in four years, $60,000 in five years, $70,000 in five years, and $70,000 in seven years. These are the first of the $1,700,000 bonds for road building at the recent election.

Money Rolls Into City From Fines

Clayton, proprietor of a pool hall, 415 Main street, paid a fine of $10 for allowing minors in his place, and two boys, Joe Owens and Albert Kidder, contributed $10 and $5 respectively.

CHANGE IN LOCATION OF BRIDGE SUIT BASIS

Contending that the new bridge to be constructed across the Willamette river, connecting Oregon City and West Linn, can be built at Ninth street in Oregon City at a saving of $100,000 over the present location of Seventh street, eight Main street property owners joined here Wednesday in a suit against the county court to restrain the county from selling bonds, already authorized, amounting to $105,000 for the construction of a bridge at Seventh street. The plaintiffs are John Busch, A. B. Buckles, John Fairclough, Fred C. Gade, C. G. Miller, Ralph C. Parker, William R. Logus and Lee Hall, and they are represented by Attorney William M. Stone.

The complaint recites that last November the voters of Clackamas county authorized a bond issue of $1,700,000 for permanent roads; that the bridge is not a road, and that the court proposes to issue bonds to the amount of $105,000 and pay the money over to the state highway commission; that the proposed bridge does not connect with any road or highway to be improved by money to be realized from the sale of the bonds; that the bridge connects on the Oregon City side with a street under the control of Oregon City, and with an improved highway on the West Linn side already improved, and it is therefore argued that the bridge is not a permanent road which can be constructed and maintained with money realized from the sale of bonds under the provisions of the county road bonding act. It is further alleged that the contract for the construction of the bridge is to be let in the name of the state highway commission and that when the money is paid over to the commission the county will lose all control over its expenditure.

Plaintiffs admit that it is their intention to force the county court to refer the matter of the bridge location to the people at the primary election next May, and that it is not their intention to block the construction of the bridge altogether. It is generally understood, they say, that the state highway bridge engineering department favors the Ninth street location, as being cheaper by about 25 per cent than at Seventh street. The estimate submitted by the highway engineer is $237,000, but it is said by the plaintiffs that this figure was correct when made, but that subsequent rising costs will bring the cost of a bridge at Seventh street to close to $400,000.

If a restraining order is obtained, then the question of giving the people the final voice in the matter will be raised, and with the understanding that the decision of the people of the county shall be regarded as final. Another angle to the controversy appeared Wednesday in the statement of one of the plaintiffs that the removal of the site to Ninth street would give the county two bridges, as the present Seventh street structure could be maintained as a bridge for light traffic and for pedestrians, and the heavy pipe and electric wires that the bridge carries could be transferred to the new structure.

DAVID CAUFIELD IS STRUCK BY AUTO AND PAINFULLY BRUISED

While boarding a car at Ninth and Main street Wednesday morning, David Caufield, one of the prominent and well known pioneers of this city, was struck by an automobile driven by C. Kearney, of Sixteenth and Division streets, and as a result is suffering from many painful bruises to his body. Witnesses claim it is a wonder that Mr. Caufield was not killed.

Mr. Caufield had just left the Straight & Salisbury shop at Ninth and Main streets, where he was conversing with his brother, Robert, and said he was on his way to Mel-drum Station. He had crossed the street before the electric car reached that place, and was getting aboard when the car going at a rapid rate struck him. He was carried for some distance. After Kearney had gone for some distance he was advised to report to Sheriff Wilson's office, which he did.

Oregon City has a law compelling automobiles to stop when approaching an electric car taking on passengers or passengers alighting, and Kearney failed to stop his automobile, which caused the accident.

Kearney has not been arrested.

Pieces of Eight

Being the Authentic Narrative of a Treasure Discovered in the Bahama Islands in the Year 1903—Now First Given to the Public.

BY RICHARD LEGALLIENNE

Copyright by Doubleday, Page & Company

While he was attending a little group of customers I had wandered toward the back of the store, curiously examining the thousand and one commodities which supplied the strange needs of humanity here in this lost corner of the world; and, thus occupied, I was diverted by a voice like sudden music, a voice oddly rich and laughing and confident for such grim and sinister surroundings. It was one, too, which I seemed to have heard before, and not so very long ago. When I turned in its direction I was immediately arrested, as one always is by any splendor of vitality; for a startling contrast indeed—to the spiritless, furtive figures that had been coming and going hitherto—was this superb young creature, tall and lithe, with proudly carried head on glorious shoulders. Her skin was a golden olive, and it had been hard to say which was the more intensely black—her hair, or the proud eyes that, turning presently in my direction, seemed to strike upon me as with an actual impact of soft fire.

My presence seemed at once to put her on her guard. The music of her voice was suddenly hushed, as though she had hurriedly, almost in terror, thrown a robe of reticence about an impulsive naturalness not to be displayed before strangers. As for the storekeeper, he was evidently a familiar acquaintance. He had known her—she said after she was gone—since she was a little girl.

While he spoke, my eyes had accidentally fallen on the coin still in his hand, with which she had just paid him.

"Why," I said, "this is a Spanish doubloon!"

"That's what it is," said the Englishman laconically.

"But doesn't it strike you as strange that she should pay her bills with Spanish doubloons?" I asked.

"It did at first," he answered; and then, as if annoyed with himself, he was attempting to retrieve an expression that carried an implication he evidently didn't wish me to retain, he added: "Of course, she doesn't always pay in Spanish doubloons. I suppose they have a few old coins in the family and use them when they run out of others."

It was as lame an explanation as well could be, and no one could doubt that, whatever his reason for so doing, he was lying.

"But haven't you trouble in disposing of them?" I inquired.

"Gold is always good," he answered, "and we don't see enough of it here to be particular as to whose head is stamped upon it, or what date. Besides, as I said, it isn't as if I got many of them; and you can always dispose of them as curiosities."

"Will you sell me this one?" I asked.

"I see no harm in your having it," he said, "but I'd just as soon you didn't mention where you got it."

"Certainly," I answered, disguising my wonder at his secretiveness. "What is it worth?"

He named the sum of sixteen dollars and seventy-five cents. Having paid him that amount I bade him good-night, glad to be alone with my eager, glowing thoughts. These I took with me to a bit of coral beach, made doubly white by the moon, rustled over by giant palms, and whispered to by the vast living jewel of the sea. I took out my strange doubloon and flashed it in the moon.

"But, brightly as it shone, it hardly seemed as bright as it would have seemed a short while back; or, perhaps, it were truer to say that in another, newer aspect it shone a hundred times more brightly. The adventure to which it called me was no longer single and simple as before, but a gloriously confused goal of cloudy splendors, the burning core of which—suddenly raying out, and then lost again in brightness—were the eyes of a mysterious girl.

PORTLAND, Feb. 6.—Work on five highways was mapped out at a meeting of the state highway commission today. The traffic lanes considered were the Pacific, Columbia, McKenzie, The Dalles-California and the Baker-Cornucopia highways.

The commission ordered paved the last unsurfaced gap on the Pacific highway between Portland and Salem, this being the 4.1-mile section between Canby and Aurora. Bids on this job will be called for at the March meeting and by state fair time the highway between the metropolis and the capital should be completely hardsurfaced.

Receiving an offer from Multnomah county of $85,000 for the Mount Hood loop, if the commission would match this sum, the commission dictated a letter to Multnomah county stating that the state and government will meet Multnomah's $85,000 with $170,000 joint. At the same time State Highway Engineer Nunn was ordered at once to select the cheapest route he can find between Zigzag and the Multnomah county line.
