Johnson In Michigan

Hiram Johnson's vote in the Michigan presidential primary is not an astonishing political incident, when one considers recent developments in that state. Johnson ran like wild fire in Detroit, the home of Henry Ford, who, though defeated by Truman N. Newberry for United States senator, retained his personal popularity in his own city.

While the political strength of Johnson does not signify that he will be a powerful factor in the Republican national convention, the result in Michigan certainly places that state on record on the covenant of the league of nations. Mr. Johnson is the leader in this country of the irreconcilables. He is unalterably opposed to affiliation of any character with European countries, except along the ordinary and well traveled lanes of diplomacy.

Mr. Merchant

"Your advertising must function" as regularly and systematically as the opening and closing of your store. "Employ advertising as you employ a salesman, and keep it busy. Know what your advertising for all the year will cost you, and know that, far from saving, you are losing money when you conserve a dollar that appropriation.

NOSE DIVES
..and...
TAIL SPINS

- The public schools
Are the bulwark of the nation,
One don't need to be a candidate
For office
To sap that with a good grace.
But higher education
Tends to alienate men and women.
From manual work
Necessary in food production.
From every part of the United States
Comes the call for help on the farm.
Ten years ago
The visible food supply
Of the world,
Was sufficient to last
Fifteen months.
Now by careful conservation,
It may last seven months
In other words we are
Seven months ahead of starvation.
The United States has idle land
That under cultivation
Would feed the world.
Instead there is a lot of talking
And loafing on the job.
If Nose Dives,
Was a candidate for office
It might not be good politics
To say
We need a few Orientals
To help raise our food supply.
For unless there is an exodus
Back to the farm.
It will mean Oriental labor.
Or a scant larder.
Rather educate the Orientals
To a higher standard of living
Make use of his labor,
And then some of us will have
More time
To run for office.

Old Hitching Post

One more institution has gone by the boards. It is the hitching post, that once fringed every village square. Along with the passing of Dobbin in the cities, where speed is a necessary adjunct to business and pleasure, the rural districts, likewise, have forsaken their horse-drawn vehicles.

Whole Family Must Be Pleased With Car

Mother thinks of her children's opportunity and the possibilities of their success. Daughter thinks of social prestige and happy marriage. Son thinks of joy and life, travel and 'get up and go'.
