LOCALS AND PERSONALS

Jack Wood, who is well and favorably known in Oregon City, where he was connected with the Oregon City Manafacturing Company as traveling salesman for nineteen years, and later purchased the transportation business from the late C. N. Greenman, has decided that Oregon City is a pretty good place after all. He has decided to enter business, again here, and has leased the building formerly occupied by Price Brothers on Seventh and Main streets, where he will operate a government goods store. Mr. Wood will open the store for business Thursday morning, and will be assisted by August Rakel, of this city. He intends to carry a full line of government goods including groceries, canned meats and wearing apparel. As Jack appeared on Main street Tuesday, you could hear Wood's many friends calling out "Hello, Jack, are you back with us the home of her daughter, Mrs. E again?" Nine years ago he left Ore J.
