The aid and stimulation that such service may give to foreign trade is obvious. It is but another step for specialization of banking organizaer institutions in this field. Its value is plainly shown by the numger of inquiries which come from other banks throughout the country to which manufacturers and merchants apply for information about the factors in export trade with which they are not familiar. of the United States is limited to 250. Especially in the fields of letters and statecraft do these religious liberals stand out preeminently in the judgment of the Hall of Fame electors. Of thirteen authors who have received elections nine were Unitarians, and a tenth, John Greenleaf Whittier, is described as a Unitarian Quaker.

Unitarians, and a tenth, John Greenleaf Whittler, is described as a Unitarian Quaker.

With Whittier in this class are Rahn Waldo Emerson, essavist: the poets Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, James Russoll Lowell, William Cullen Bryant and Oliver Wendell Holmes: George Sancroft, John Lothrop Motley and Francis Parkman, historians; and Nathaniel Hawthorne. Washington Irving, James Fenimore Cooper and Edgar Allan Poe are the contributions of other religious belieus to this class.

Of the seven American Presidents who have been elected to the Hall of Fame in the "Rulers and Statesmen" class John Adams and John Quincy Adams were members of and are buried beneath the Unitarian Church in Quincy, Mass. Thomas Jefferson attended the Episcopal Church near Monticello but his entire public career revealed him as a religious liberal. In fact, he is on record as having said: "I trust that the same free exercise of private judgment which gave us our political reformation, will extend its effect to that of religion." As a prophet, however, he was without honor when he said nearly one hundred years ago:

"It trust that there is not a young man now in the United States who will not die a Unitarian."

Lincoln is also included with the Adamses and Jefferson by some Unitarian writers because the author of "Six Months at the White House" quotes him as saying:

"When any church will inscribe over its altar, as its sole qualifica-and Gospel, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor as thyself," that church will I join with all my heart and all my soul."

In the present article, however, Lincoln is not counted as a Unitarian, but is classified with Washington and Madison, both Episcopalians, and Andrew Jackson, Presbyterian.

Completing the Unitarian representation in this class are Benjamin Franklin and Daniel Webster. Not classified in the total of eleven are Henry Clay and Alexander Hamilton. Of the two educators liberal Christianity claims Horace ann, "father of the public school." Mark Hopkins is the Mann, "father of the public school." Mark Hopkins is the other.

Of the two philanthronists and reformers Peter Cooper, founder of Cooper Union in New York City for the advancement of science and art, was a Unitarian. George Peabody shares the honors in this class.

Of the scientists the Unitarian Louis Agassiz is one of four, the others being John James Audubon, Asa Gray and Joseph Henry.

Ohief Justice Marshall of the United States Supreme Court and Associate Justice Joseph Story were elected as lawyers and judges, their two companions in this class being Jenus Kent and Rafus Phonto.

Two of the six women who have been elected to the Hall of Fame were Unitarians, Maria Mitchell, astronomer, and Charlotte Cushman, the famous actress. Harriet Beecher Stowe, Mary Lyon, Emma Willard and Frances E, Willard complete the feminine representation in the colonnade.

Classes in which the Unitarisms are not represented are inventors, Robert Fulton, Samuel F. B. Morse, Ell Whitney and Ellas Howe; Daniel Boone, explorer; David Glascoe Farragut, Ulysses Simpson Grant, Robert E. Lee and William Tecumseh Sherman, classified as soldiers and sailors, and Gilbert Charles Stuart, portrait painter.

As candidates may not be placed in nomination until they As candidates may not be based in nomination until they have been dead ten years Billy Sunday is not eligible. Among the four preachers and theologians who have been elected, however, is William Ellery Channing, who presented so forcibly the principles of the Unitarian faith that as the result of a single sermon 130 churches severed their former denominational ties and accepted his position.

Thus one sermon, known since 1819 as the "Baltimore sermon", exerted an immediate tangible influence that is revealed today in the numerous "First Parishes" of the Pilgrim Fathers which have been for a century included in the Unitarian Fellowship. Channing's sermon was not an emotional appeal made on an necession which in this day would be described as a "revival," but was a carefully conceived and rationally phrased statement of a great thinker and eloquent preacher who had been invited from Bostos to Baltimore to preach the sermon at the installation of the minister who had been called to lead a new society of Christian liberals.

As reports spread of the principles enunciated by Channing there came such a demand for them in the printed word that five editions were exhausted in six weeks. A century later Channing's "Unitarian Christianity" still enjoys a large circulation among the publications of the American Unitarian Association, and is being used ext. asively in the Unitarian religious and educational campaign of which William H. Ta't is the leader. In 1900, Channing was elected to the Hall of Pame with Jonathan Edwards and Henry Ward Beecher. Phillips Brooks was added to the list in 1910. It is significant that Beecher and Brooks were among the most liberal thinkers in their respective orthodox communions.

Among the Unitarians who received high votes in 1915 and are in nomination for election this year are Louiss May Alcott and Helen Hunt Jackson, authors; Lucretia Mati, ploneer suffragist; and Dorothea Dix, who developed the modern system for care of the inshue and was called by President Fillmore "the most useful and distinguished woman has ready and the contract."
