Canby Free From Danger of Typhoid

CANBY, Feb. 3.—Owing to a test made from samples of Canby's city water, the state health board has advised that all water to be used for drinking purposes be boiled, until further investigation is made.

The samples examined by the board showed that there was an over amount of colon bacilli, and it is presumed that this is caused from water from one of the wells recently dynamited in order to deepen it and increase the supply.

The wells supplying the city with water are located in block 16.

So far there are no cases of typhoid fever reported, but it is believed that the early precaution has been the means of preventing an epidemic.

There are many families who are being supplied with water from wells at their own homes, and believing in "safety first" are taking no chances, and are doing as others—boiling all drinking water.

There has been very little sickness in Canby for the past year, and when there was a report circulated that there were several cases of typhoid, immediate investigation proved that the report was false.

Telephone Company Has Annual Meeting

CANBY, Feb. 3.—The Canby Co-operative Telephone company held its annual meeting in this city Saturday. The assessment was made, and will be $12 the same as last year.

Arrangements are being made for the removal of the office from the present headquarters in the home of Mrs. R. Soper in the northern part of the city. Mrs. Soper and family are to occupy a residence on C. street, and the office will be installed in a cottage adjoining. The change is being made in order to have the office centrally located.

Mrs. Soper has been the faithful chief operator for the company since its establishment here, and has made many friends by her obliging manner and her untiring efforts in giving service throughout the district where the lines extend.

Among the places where the lines extend are half way to Molalla, Aurora, Needy, New Era, Barlow, Macksburg and other sections.

Mrs. Soper is being assisted in operating by her daughter, Miss Rena, also a competent operator.

CITY DADS FIND $7000 TO APPLY ON FIRE TRUCK

Echoes of the city hall-fire truck contention were heard in stentorian tones in the chambers of the city council Wednesday evening when the city dads met in regular session. The first reiteration was loosened by a committee from the Hill Improvement club, consisting of W. L. Little, Duane Ely, and Carl Green, who asked the city to call a special election for the purpose of having the word "par" stricken from the terms of the bond issue under which funds are to be raised to pay for the proposed city hall, and the fire truck which has already been received in Portland.

According to the committee's statements it is impossible to sell the bonds at par, and inasmuch as it would require an entirely new procedure to secure a change from the 5 per cent interest allowed, they have been advised that by allowing the bonds to sell for less than face value, the sale will be expedited and the loss of revenue to the city will be more than taken care of by the savings affected by decreasing building costs. A hall such as Oregon City requires can be built now for $24,000, says the committee, whereas $35,000 was voted for that purpose. Considerable discussion ensued, the legality of calling a special election to secure the necessary change in the bond issue was heard, with the result that the city attorney was instructed to investigate and report at a special meeting February 16th. The Hill Improvement club, in order to lessen the expense of the election, agrees to furnish the clerks and judges free of charge to the city.

The situation concerning the truck and city hall, always a delicate matter, was given the appearance of a veritable powder-keg when Dr. Hugh Mount, of the third ward, took the floor against the plan to secure action on the bond issue. Mount's stand was based on the proposition that the city hall could not be legally placed in McLoughlin Park, where the voters authorized it, and he cited the city attorney to a decision of the supreme court concerning a similar case in Portland. With this effect, Ely was not prepared to say that it could not be placed there legally, he admitted that he was "impressed" by the court's action, and very much had his doubts as to the matter.

Taking the matter up from another angle, it was declared by Dr. Mount, and concurred in by members of the council, that the city council had never purchased a fire truck, that the action of the mayor and the previous council was illegal, and that under the present contract with the fire truck company the city could not be held for any consideration whatsoever. An ordinance, it was said, should have been passed for the purpose of buying the truck, but this was not done, and the informal action of the council has left the present situation in a very critical condition. Just what the outcome of the revelations might be, no one at the meeting was willing to conjecture, but the seriousness of the affair impressed all listeners.

Plans submitted by Dr. Mount for the immediate purchase of the machine were squelched by various heads of committees, who sought to protect the cemetery, general and road funds from onslaught. Mount's proposal was to take the necessary amount from the several funds of the city and get the truck. The final action taken authorized the city treasurer to invest $7,000 of the cemetery funds in the bonds, and Councilman Bridges reported that he was convinced that the truck company would take the balance. The vote on this proposition showed Albright, Bridges, Kraxberg, Mount and Petzold in favor, and Cross, Metzner, and VanAuker opposed. Van Auker made a strong talk against securing the truck, urging that any money available for that purpose be spent on the roads. He crossed bats on several occasions with Dr. Mount, and challenged the people who were opposing the city hall on the hill to come out with a definite stand against it. To commence construction and take the chances of an injunction suit to prevent completion of the hall was urged as one way to settle the matter, but after all sides were heard there were as many conflicting opinions, verdicts, judgments, and ideas as there were councilmen and committeemen present, and nothing further was done.

City Recorder Kelly announced that there would be a meeting of the state highway commission with the city street committee and other interested bodies here on the morning of February 12th to discuss plans for paving the Pacific Highway between Oregon City and Canemah. The city attorney reported on various matters which had been referred at a previous meeting, and introduced a proposed ordinance regulating the salaries of city officials. The ordinance was read first time, and will be given final action on the 16th at a special meeting. An ordinance covering the licensing of wholesale delivery wagons here was laid on the table for further consideration before action.

A report from the city recorder, in conjunction with a letter from the Oregon City Abstract Company, called attention to thousands of dollars of unpaid assessments against property in the city, and the attorney was instructed to find out if the money can be collected. No liens are held against the property involved, although the city is liable for the amount of the bonds issued for the improvements.

The chief of police was authorized to employ any special traffic officers to stop excess speeding, running with out-outr open, and other disturbances of the peace. It was charged by

MEDFORD BODY WOULD BAR JAPS FROM OREGON

MEDFORD, Or., Feb. 2.—The chamber of commerce at its forum meeting today pledged support to the local American Legion post in its campaign begun last night against Japanese holdings or land purchases, by adopting a resolution asking the legislature to pass an emergency law modeled after the California alien land law. The chamber's executive committee met this afternoon with representatives of civic and fraternal organizations to outline a policy to be pursued to put an end to the threatened Japanese menace.

The American legion campaign was precipitated by the reported plan of colonizing 1000 Japanese from California in the Rogue river valley before the Oregon legislature can pass an anti-alien land-owning and leasing law like California.

COUNTY SENDS MEN AWAY FOR INSTRUCTION

Richard Striker and S. E. Baker, employees of the county, will leave today at the county's expense for Spokane, Wash., where they will receive a two-weeks' course of instruction on the care and maintenance of "Caterpillar" tractors. Both men have been operating the county road tractors for some time past, and the court decided that rather pay out money to have the big machines repaired every so often, they would have two of the county employees become experts at it, and therefore eliminate costly repairs.

According to County Judge Cross, experts are required to keep the big machines in repair and as the Holt Machinery company offers a free course of instruction at their plant in Spokane, it was thought a wise move to send the two men there, and pay their running expenses while learning to be expert "Caterpillar" tractor repair men.
