Telephone Office In New Quarters

CANBY, March 9.—The office of the Canby Co-operative Telephone Company that has been having headquarters at the home of Mrs. S. Soper in the northern part of the city for the past fifteen years, has been moved to a cottage on C street. A new switch board with modern conveniences has been installed, and is in charge of Mrs. Soper, who has held the position as chief operator since the line was established here. Miss Rena Hutchinson, daughter of Mrs. Soper, is assistant operator. As the residence where the telephone office is installed is almost too small for the accommodation of the Soper family, a portion of a residence adjoining has been rented by Mrs. Soper, several of the rooms of which are occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Zabel, recently coming to this city.

While changing the 55 wires of the telephone company by Russell Scramlin and Grover Harris, the patrons of the company had continuous service, and the company is being highly praised by the many patrons for the excellent service during that time and since installing, although previous to that time the company has given satisfaction since establishing its lines here. Mrs. Soper will rent her home recently vacated.

RULING ALLOWS LIQUOR SOLD ON PRESCRIPTIONS

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.—Beer and wines are given the same status as whisky under an opinion by the attorney-general made public Wednesday by the bureau internal revenue.

The ruling, one of the most important since the advent of prohibition, makes it possible for all alcoholic liquors to be used for medicinal and other non-beverage purposes and for all to be manufactured and sold for these purposes, subject only to limitations of the Volstead act on non-leverage intoxicants.

The opinion was written by former Attorney-General Palmer. Whether it will upset any regulations of the revenue and enforcement bureaus had not been made known at this time, Commissioner Williams saying he had not an opportunity to study the opinion. He said officials concerned with the enforcement would prepare at once to draft regulations.

There were many rumors that the opinion had wrecked plans of dry advocates to obtain further restriction of liquor sales. Officials refused to comment on the reports, however, but Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the anti-saloon league, said 33 states had state codes prohibiting the prescribing of beer for medicinal purposes.

The Metric System

The metric system, which measures everything in tens, is the logical basis for all human computations and measurements. The reason for this is that all of us are equipped with 10 fingers and 10 toes. From the time we are taught to say "this little pig went to market," our attention is directed to our digits. We normally count in tens.

Thus it would seem reasonable for this country to adopt the metric system and do away with our clumsy measurements of miles, pounds, bushels and gallons. Bills are even now before both houses of congress providing for such a change. All scientific work is done metrically. The system is universally used on the continent of Europe. Only England and the United States lag.

To be sure, it would be a difficult thing to accustom people to buy milk by the liter, to weigh goods by the gram and measure distances by the meter. France, when the system was put into effect there in the days of the revolution, suffered some inconveniences for a time. In fact, it was not until the period of the second empire that its use became universal.

Two million Americans who recently took a notable little journey to France are now more or less accustomed to the metric system. If the change is ever to be made in this country, this seems a good time. It will not mean that work will be any easier, or that the cost of living will come down. But it will mean that the arithmetic of business will be greatly simplified. Our money is already metric. Why not make our measurements of other things conform?

Any man will tell you that he gets inspiration out of smoking, but other folk do not notice that he is any smarter.

The sensitive woman who has a husband with deficient table manners is convinced that Job was a mere piker in the patience game.

When a man follows a dozen women in line at a cafeteria, he almost regrets that he voted for woman suffrage, especially if he has only half an hour for lunch.

FARMERS WILL PROTEST PHONE RATE ADVANCE

George J. Hall, at one time manager here of the Pacific Telephone company, announced Wednesday that a mass meeting will be called soon of all the rural telephone users in Clackamas county for the purpose of entering a protest over the recent telephone rates, advance which went into effect March 1.

Hall alleges that when the rural lines were connected up with the Pacific switchboard here, a contract was signed at that time between the Pacific company and rural lines in effect that $5.40 a year would be charged for each telephone, with the understanding that if subscribers increased over 2000, a charge would automatically go into effect of $7.20 up to 3000 subscribers. It is claimed that the present rural telephone rates do not total 2000 at present, and that the rural line representatives were not consulted before the raise was granted by the public service commission.

According to the increase granted a few days ago by the public service commission to the Pacific company, rural telephone subscribers will have to pay $9.00 per year, instead of $5.40, the old rate. Nearly every subscriber is protesting over the excessive and exorbitant rates allowed, and it is expected that the mass meeting called to take place here in a few days will see every subscriber in attendance.

While there has been some talk of a recall of the members of the commission, nothing definite has been done as yet, in the way of petitions, but the Live Wires, at their next meeting, will face the situation in the form of a resolution to be presented, and will take action, it is reported.

Will America Longer Ignore Problem Involving Her Future National Life?

Public Is Warned to Awake to Perils and Opportunities in Immigration—Leaders Urge Necessity of Impartial Study of Facts.

By HENRY WILLARD BREVIS

Is America in danger of losing its national identity and of becoming a sort of miniature League of Nations? Will America continue longer to ignore a problem—the immigration problem—which involves her very life and her future as a nation? With nearly one-third of her population made up of foreign born and of people of foreign parentage and with millions of others now migrating to her shores, is America content with haphazard and temporary expedients, or will American statesmanship, American business, American labor, American agriculture and the American people as a whole unite in the formulation and adoption of a fundamental, forward-looking policy on the vital twin subjects of immigration and assimilation? These and many other startling questions relating to the results of past and the effects of future immigration, are sharply raised by Frances A. Kellor of New York, one of the country's best known immigration authorities, in a remarkable new book entitled "Immigration and the Future."

Indeed, so important to the country's welfare is an orderly and intelligent solution of these problems regarded by leading thinkers, that many of them are actively seeking to arouse wide public interest in the questions raised by the author. A number of them have joined in an effort to urge that America shall formulate a sound, constructive, national policy based upon an exhaustive study of every phase of the problem. Among them are: Paul M. Warburg, of New York, former Vice Governor of the Federal Reserve Board; Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, former President of Cornell University; Prof. E. R. A. Seligman, Professor of Economics, Columbia University; Paul D. Cravath, New York attorney; John H. Fahey, of Boston, former President of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago, President of the Sears, Roebuck Company; William C. Smith, New York State Commissioner of Immigration; Education; William Butterworth, President of Deere & Company, Moline, Ill.; Miss Mary I. O'Donnell, Secretary, Bureau of Americanization of the making no organized effort to attract experienced agriculturists from among the immigrant and immigration peoples? If future immigration is to be assimilated into the fabric of American life, instead of continuing to remain practically alien, what policies are to be pursued? To find answers to these questions, Miss Kellor points out, means that a vast amount of data must be collected from America and foreign sources and analyzed by a competent body free from taint of propaganda or of control by special interest. "What America needs," she says again, "is not more technical regulations, not the extension of hardships, not the erection of barriers based on temporary expedients, but a racial inventory and formulation of policies, with such general powers as will enable the government to meet any situation as it arises. And it needs more than all a policy of assimilation which will cover the reception, distribution and adjustment of immigrants after arrival so we can really ascertain if we have assimilated the immigrants who have entered, with a view to determining how many we may wisely admit." Inasmuch as Miss Kellor has been identified with almost every public movement for solution of immigration problems, and is a widely known authority upon the subject, her book is expected to quicken national interest in the stranger within and knocking at our gates.

Detroit Board of Commerce; Harris Whittemore, President, Eastern Malleable Iron Company, Nagsawatch, Conn.; E. J. McHenry, New York, Editor of Engineering News Record; G. H. Carnahan, President, Intercontinental Rubber Company, New York; Ernest T. Trigg, Vice-President, John Lucas & Company, Inc., Philadelphia; Adelbert Moot, Buffalo, N. Y., Regent, University of the State of New York; William G. Willcox, former President of the Board of Education of New York City; John Williams, former Deputy Commissioner of Labor of the State of New York, and others. Grave international problems, the future of American foreign trade, the friendly or unfriendly relation of the United States to many of the nations of the world as well as a host of internal problems are shown by Miss Kellor to be involved in the determination of our national immigration policy. Europe Holding Its Nationals While America is failing to give adequate consideration to the questions involved in the movement of aliens to her shores, European countries are not ignoring their own interests as affected by movement abroad of their nationals. According to Miss Kellor's book, these nations are even now planning to tie their emigrants permanently to the home land by granting them a voice in home affairs whether they become naturalized here or not. What is America going to do about that? inquires the writer. Other pertinent questions raised by the book are: Will American employers of labor continue to regard our immigrant population only as so much cheap man-power, or will they take the trouble to discover its other and more valuable economic elements, such as love of industry, special mechanical skill, habits of thrift and ambition for greater productive power and family advancement? Will American business try to build up a great trade with foreign countries while considering beneath its notice a market of 15,000,000 foreign-born people in her midst and growing at the rate of a million a year? Will American bankers seek a world-wide financial supremacy, while they ignore the savings and investing powers of the immigrant millions now here and yet to come? Will American farmers continue to cry for capable farm labor, while
