Feminine Enterprise

It is rather singular that retail trade has been so nearly monopolized by men. Women have done most of the household purchasing and are skillful bargainers. They have those graces and courtesies that are so useful to a seller of any product. In school they manifest accuracy, so they should be able to run a business systematically. Seemingly they have the qualifications for success as owners of stores. Yet up to a few years ago, comparatively few entered this field.

Many women have done well in the millinery trade, and in specialties of women's wear. In taking up other lines, they are perhaps handicapped by the conservatism of bankers who may have doubts about extending credit to a woman merchant.

Women have taken up enterprises that could be carried on in their homes or in a part of their time, and which thus were suited to the obligations of those having families. In this way they have run gift shops, conducted ice cream and soft drink places, have supplied toilet articles, neckwear, candle shades, embroidery and artistic rugs and baskets, artificial flowers, and hundreds of other pleasing products. The trouble with most of these enterprises is, that they do not supply basic essentials. When business is dull or times hard, such projects go on the rocks. A bakery to supply cooked food, or a boarding house to serve meals, would be a better source of income.

As women gain confidence in their own powers, as business men see what women can do and are more willing to trust them with capital, it seems inevitable that many of them should become successful merchandisers.

Many of the bright girls now in the schools of Oregon City will probably in 20 years be taking a conspicuous position in our business life.

WOMAN, 81 DRESSES SELF IN 5 MINUTES

THE DALLES, Or., March 28.—Although 81 years old, Dr. Owens-Adair, a visitor in The Dalles Thursday, is still able to perform a feat which few younger women would care to attempt. During her younger days, when she was practicing medicine, Dr. Owens-Adair always boasted that she could dress and start on a call within five minutes after the call had been received.

While staying over night with a friend in The Dalles Thursday night, she over slept, waking with just ten minutes in which to catch the train. A taxi was hurriedly called, arriving at the house exactly five minutes after the call had been put in. Completely attired, her hair combed and hand-bag packed, Dr. Owens-Adair appeared at the door ready to leave for Portland. She caught the train.

KIDNAPPING CASE OPENS AT TACOMA

TACOMA, Wash., March 25.—When the trial of Hugh Van Amburgh, confessed kidnapper of Arthur Rust, whom he held for $20,000 ransom which was not obtained, opened in superior court Thursday attorneys clashed early. The defense announced that the war record of the defendant would be introduced as evidence and the prosecution answered with the declaration that it would fight to keep the record from the jury.

Van Amburgh took part in seven major engagements with the 6th Marines and wears numerous decorations from the United States and French governments. The defense has not indicated whether a plea would be made that the war veteran was insane when he abducted the millionaire's son. A previous petition for a sanity hearing has not been pressed.

MAN HELD UP IN BROAD DAYLIGHT NEAR WEST LINN

A hold-up took place in broad daylight Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock when Frank Holliday, of Portland, was stopped on the sidewalk near the rock crusher at Belton and forced to hand over $20 in cash to two highwaymen, who ordered him to "stick 'em up," at the point of a revolver.

Holliday was on his way to Oregon City from Bolton, and as he neared the rock crusher, two young men with handkerchiefs over their faces emerged from the timber along the side of the road and advanced towards him. When they neared Holliday, one of the pair ordered him to "stick 'em up" and Holliday, thinking that it was a joke, did not immediately comply with the demand. However, when he felt the muzzle of a revolver pressing him in the stomach and threw up his hands. One robber held the revolver while the other went through Holliday's pockets, obtaining around $20 in cash.

As the highwaymen started off Holliday asked them if they would leave him enough for carfare to Portland, and one of the thugs threw him a dollar with the remark, "I guess this will cover it." Holliday's watch was not taken, and when he asked the thugs if they were going to take the watch, which was a fine one, both highwaymen said that they could not use watches.

Holliday came on to Oregon City and told the authorities here that he thought there was no use looking for the two thugs, as he was certain that they had made a good getaway during the time that he consumed in walking to Oregon City from Bolton. Both robbers were described as being young men, wore dark soft shirts and caps, and were dressed in rough-looking suits.
