June has been from ancient times a favorite month for weddings, and a halo of sentiment surrounds this fraction of the yearly cycle. The reason is no doubt that the month is considered a favorable time for floral decorations. In spite of the tendency of many bridal couples to avoid the expense of elaborate ceremonies. vet most girls, want to have a pretty wedding, even if it is a small one. The bride elect's heart is full of imaginative impulse, and it takes the beauty of flowers to express her notion of the occasion. The wedding scene must be a picture, and nature must build the framework of floral loveliness, in which the spiritual beauty of a loving union is the motive.

Bridegrooms do not commonly care to have the wedding looked at in the light of a picture. They would rather slip out of town to the parsonage of some friendly minister, and have the frills and feathers omitted. But innumerable bridegrooms have been dragged behind the triumphal chariot, much as captive kings were paraded before the populace in ancient Greece and Rome.

Large and stylish weddings are sometimes condemned as ostentatious. They are so if people spend an unreasonable amount of money. The dollars fly fast in the hands of some of these spenders. Long ranks of dress suited darkies imported from some distant city have to pass the costly refreshments. Imported floral decorators lavish their orchids and palms, and expensive musicians contribute their art.

But many girls with democratic feeling have done the same thing in a simpler way. They dislike to ignore any of their friends, but want them all to be there and see their happiness. The decorations are done by amateurs, catering is simply arranged by home town providers, the music is home made, and every one is just as happy. But however the June bride sees fit to manage it, there will be no criticism of her methods. All hearts wish her and her choice the best of luck and all good gifts.
