The code is comprehensive in its scope, necessitated by the growth of corresponding increase in traffic congestion of the city. It centralizes in one ordinance all of the numerous rules and regulations which have been passed by the city council during the past several years.

Fred Shoemaker, commissioner of public safety, has ordered thousands of copies of the new traffic code printed for free distribution among all motorists.

WORK ON MT. HOOD LOOP TO START NOW

PORTLAND, June 2.—Mt. Hood loop road will be cleared and graded this season for the 23 miles between Multnomah county line and Zigzag. It is possible that part of it may even be macadamized this year.

This announcement was made on Thursday by Robert A. Booth, chairman of the state highway commission, following information received from the Multnomah county commission that Multnomah county had pledged $170,000 toward the road.

Action by the commissioners of Multnomah county will result in the job being rushed. The state, with aid from Clackamas and Multnomah counties, will build from the Multnomah line to Zigzag, which is at the forest reserve. Within the forest the road will be 37 miles long. Of this distance, 14 miles have been finished, as to grade, from Zigzag to the government camp and a couple of miles beyond.

The government has let a contract for clearing and grading 6 miles at the Hood river county end of the road and this contract will be finished this season. The intervening 17 miles will be cleared this season and contract will be let for grading it next year.

If the proposed bond issue in Hood River county is voted at the special election next week, the entire loop will have been financed from end to end.

At a special meeting of the Multnomah county commissioners Thursday, the loop matter was quickly settled. This meeting followed a conference with the highway commission Wednesday at which time the state body informed the county officials that if $170,000 was pledged by the county the state would require no further cooperation from Multnomah but would build a graded and macadamized road with bridges included.

THE DALLES ENTERTAINS STRANGE VISITOR

THE DALLES, Or., June 1.—Covered from head to foot with finest quality tar, tastily finished off with a plentiful coating of feathers. Signor Salvador Coturri, sometime resident of Italy, wandered into The Dalles recently.

He was met with open arms, by Patrolman Denmor.

At the city jail Coturri told a weird story of being held up by five men while walking from Hood River to The Dalles. The men, he declared, robbed him of nearly $100 and then, angered because he did not have more money, proceeded to administer the coat of tar and feathers.

Suspicious of the story, Chief of Police Heater at once got in connection by telephone with the Hood River police. Here he heard a different version, relative to a divergence of opinion in the matter of morality between certain citizens of Hood River and Signor Coturri, in which the signor came off second best.

The Dalles presented its unique visitor with a quart of coal oil as an antidote for the peculiar brunette complexion of his skin, and the police department made it plain that as far as they were concerned he need not tarry in the city.

Low Price Does Not Mean Cheap Berries

Consumers should not forget that when they purchase strawberries they are entitled to a full box of fruit, filled to the extreme top. Boxes that are not filled are a cheat and a violation of the law. Consumers would aid the enforcement of the law and protect themselves if they will demand full boxes of fruit.

Another vital thing that consumers should remember. A very cheap price does not mean that the price is low. It may be very high. If the fruit is not of the best quality the price is high. No matter how low it is, consumers really save nothing by purchasing off quality berries at low price because when the poor fruit is sorted out the good stock really costs more than if a higher price per box is paid.

Berry canning time is now in sight and consumers are advised not only to get their jars ready but to purchase their sugar. The chances are that prices on sugar will be higher within a short time and there is very little chance that any lower rate will be named after today's drop of 35¢ a sack.

Dee Wright Acts as Scout for Company

Dee Wright, the well known packer, who has worked 12 years in the government service, has a new position for the present but will resume his duties with the government at a later date.

Mr. Wright is employed at the present time by the Educational Film company of New York as a packer and guide. Representatives of the company recently visited Oregon City securing a number of pictures of the fishing near the rapids and falls during the fishing season, and has been in Portland for several days, where valuable pictures were taken by the camera man. Among these was an automobile accident and an airplane disaster, when three men had a narrow escape.

In order to make a scene at Newport beach this week, and elderly man was needed. Wright searched Portland one afternoon, and got the man to fill the place. Then another character was needed, this an Indian canoeist. Wright being acquainted with Fred Yelkas, son of Indian Henry, an old pioneer Indian of Molalla, hunted up the young man in Portland, and he too is to appear on the screen.

After spending about a week at Newport, where a picture will be secured, the film company will go to Mount Adams, and expects to cover much of the country before the close of the season.

Mr. Brice, who is manager of the company of seven people, says in all his travels he believes that Oregon has some of the grandest scenery he has since starting out.

The company goes prepared to camp out if necessary and Dee Wright knows just how to arrange camp and get the material to the places where camp is to be pitched. He is a valuable man to the company, and he is having a most delightful time. Mrs. Wright will accompany her husband to Newport to remain there until the necessary pictures are taken.

Wright is the son of Mrs. A. Nelson of this city, and is a former Clackamas county young man, known far and wide.

One Man Loses Life At Denver

DENVER, June 7.—The first fatality in the flood waters of the Platte river that flows through the extreme western end of this city, occurred shortly after 8 o'clock this morning when a man believed to be Joseph Richards, a laborer, attempted to cross the swollen street. He was swept away within sight of police and watchers who are having difficulty in keeping pedestrians out of the danger zone.

The river continued to rise rapidly today and at noon the Lacombe electric light plant reported that it had reached above the 11 foot stage. Normally, the river is four and one-half feet.

Word from the village of South Platte 40 miles from this city, says that 2800 feet of water per minute is running out of the large Cheesman dam. The normal flow is 1500 feet per minute. If the Cheesman dam should give way, the immense volume of water would send the South Platte river way beyond its bounds and endanger large sections of the lowlands of this city on the west side.

A drizzling rain early today contributed to the rise of the water and debris was piling up in the railroad yards of the Colorado Southern railroad near this town.

Hundreds of families have been driven out of their homes in many sections of West Denver.
