SANDY, Aug. 30 .- Chas. Krebs had another mix-up with a skunk recently, and passed away the next morning just but the "woodsy cat" got some chickens before the "22 special" got Tillamook at the time of his brother's the intruder. Krebs is getting the midaccident and came home with his night habit of "spotting" skunks! He chased this animal all around in the hen house with the doors closed, and and the grief and shock together were the poor thing took refuge among the chickens, two sleepy "birds" climbed up on the skunk. It was necessary to separate the chicks from the queer "kitty." and a movie man should have been thereto see the fun! What a picture it would have made! Lantern in hand, dodging slyly from one corner to another, shooing "cluck-hens" too sleepy to "shoo" and baby chicks that only "peeped" with the beady bright eyes of the "furry-fellar" following every move, but evidently obeying the ethics of skunkdom for he never showed any resentment whatever to his pursuer till the "22" hit him between the eyes, then "O My!" said Krebs and the rest is better left for the imagin ation! Mrs. Krebs "midly" commanded leaving "thy garments beyond the outer gate!"
