Thomas Johnston, of Estacada, and E. Pickell, of Hubbard were drowned when the San Francisco and Portland Steamship company vessel "Alaska" crashed into the reefs off Blunt's point near Mendicino Saturday night.

Johnston was given in the passenger's list as from Estacada, although conflicting reports from Eureka state that the man's home is in Brooklyn, N. Y. Mrs. Thomas Johnston, evidently the dead man's wife, has been num bered among the survivors.

Youth is Drowned E. "Ted" Pickell, who had reached his 15th birthday Friday, the day before the Alaska sank, was on his way to join his father at their home in Los Angeles. The lad had been visiting for the last few months with his sister, Mrs. Louise Crawford, on their farm near Hubbard, Or. His father is Ellsworth Pickell of Los Angeles. The mother of the boy is dead.

Immature Judgment

It is one thing to assist in the creation of a definite power for the development of a community. It is quite another thing to tear it to shreds before it has had a fair opportunity to function.

This is the position of the Portland Telegram in relation to the Oregon Tourist Commission, authorized by the last legislature and for which there was appropriated $12,500 per annum. The Telegram had a finger in the creation of the commission, but no sooner had the governor appointed the members of it, than "the paper that does things" started a fight, for reasons that will probably appear. It is current report around Portland that the Telegram developed a running sore when it was not permitted t odictate the membership and the policies and expenditures of the commission.

Leslie Butler of Hood River, is chairman of the commission, and Sidney Vincent is secretary. Mr. Butler is in the bankinig business, but he spends easily four-fifths of his time for the public good, without renumeration. He is intensely and patriotically interested in the good of his state and sacrifices his personal interests for Oregon. He is also a director of the Pacific Northwest Tourist Association and of the State Chamber of Commerce, serving without pay. Mr. Vincent is a former newspaper man, for years Portland representative of the Associated Press and was connected with the publicity and convention bureau of the Portland Chamber of Commerce until recently. He is energetic, capable and an Oregon enthusiast.

Now the Telegram is complaining because an excursion party has been organized to go to Crater Lake and Josephine Caves. Of course the commission is not financing the party. But the Telegram expects the organization, within a few months, and upon an appropriation of $1,000 a month, to erect signs on roads all over Oregon and to establish tourist depots in many towns along the line of tourist travel.

The snap-judgment attitude of the Telegram is the principal reason why men are unwilling in Oregon to devote their time in non-salaried labor for the development of the state. Yet this critical newspaper carries this slogan at the head of its editorial column as a part of its program:

"Make Oregon America's playground. Provide highways and tourist accomodations which will open to the host of American pleasure seekers Oregon's scenic wonderland and release to Oregon dividends on undeveloped recreational wealth."

Suppose, he said, your car is stalled along the roadside with trouble. Some places every passing car offers aid, and yet again in other places dozens of machines will pass without proffering help.

The fraternity of autoists is based on common interest, and often upon mutual trouble. It should be based upon mutual aid, The habit of extending a helping hand to the man who is stalled on the highway is one which more motorists should cultivate. If you have ever had a puncture or a blowout, you know how it feels to discover that your repair k't is home on the garage bench. The proffered assistance of some passing drivwelcomed. Even if you are stalled and not in need of assistance, it is a comforting thing to have the occupants of a passing machine hail you with "Need any heln?" Any state or county which expects to exploit its highways to the fullest must develop the courtesy of the road. It is a little thing, but true of most little things, it counts.

In the east, owners of a popular make of machine have organized a "courtesy club," the only obligation of which is to help owners of the same make of car in time of trouble. amount which is to be spent on the new Willamette river bridge. The outside of the expenditure covers the period of the last two years.

During th past twenty-four months located here the state has completed six large projects, including roads and bridges, and has the work on one project, the Pacific Highway at a point practically finished

The improvement of the Barlow Aurora road, by graveling entailed an expenditure of $11,450, according to Mr. Young. The Canby-Aurora gradgo grading, $57,000, the Tyron creek bridge, $6,000, the Sucker creek bridge, $69,500 and the bridge at Molalla $46,000. This work involves a total expenditure of nearly a quarter of a million of dollars.

Large Project Under Way The largest project, however, is the Pacific Highway, which will cost when completed $220,000. The portion of which Mr. Young rejected, necessitattends from Oregon City to the Multnomah county line. Work on the highway at present

If the 6,000 feet of road extending from the West Linn bridge to Bolton is not completed this year, the local office will finish its work this September, Mr. Young estimates This portion of the read has not been definitely established, due to the fact that it crosses a location of the proposed Southern Pacific main line. Mr. Young, during the time has been here, has been greatly interested in the entire road program of the state. Mr. Young surveyed three routes for this road and made plans and which Mr. Young's office has been best route, he says, is that ever the estimates for the construction. The old South End road-taking the hill route This route would cross the bridge, going straight through to the S. A grade of six percent, which is less than the grade on ing ost $35,000, the Oregon City-Oswe- the highway near Oswego, could be attained. The cost of this route, Mr. Young estimates at $162,176.

A route was surveyed along the river which would follow the present line past the mills. The cost of this however, would be nearly $16,000 . greater, due to the fact that cement structures would have to be built from the bank in order to support a widened road.
Due to the excessive cost of bota these routes, Mr. Young laved a location which would not reach such a is in progress near Bolton, and the high figure. Altho this location is not as desirable it would provide a great improvement over the present route. He planned to follow the existing line, using the present crossing at 3rd street. The road would be widened, and a better grade secured. This could be done at a cost of $96,500.

These figures, however do not include hard surface, but merely the laving of the sub grade, and the placing of all structures so that the road is actually ready to surface.

While the work in Clackamas county has involved a large expenditure, the results obtained have been worth while, says Mr Young. The finest under the present building program will be in good condition to give
