SOLUTION TO WATER SUPPLY PROBLEM AT WEST LINN OUTLINED

Pipe Across Willamette to be Hung on Cable While Bridge is Down

A tentative solution for the problem of supplying the city of West Linn and vicinity with water during the time that the new bridge across the Willamette river is under construction has been arranged.

Within a few days a contract is to be entered into between the West Linn water commission and A. Gutrie, contractor, on the new bridge, for the maintenance of a suspension pipe line. At present the water main, which serves the west side, runs over the old bridge, which is to be torn down about the first of the year.

In order to keep the service open the new main will be stretched on a cable which will be suspended from wooden towers or poles to be placed upon each side of the Willamette. The water commission recently purchased a new supply of pipe which will be used to carry the main service over the new bridge. This pipe will be temporarily stretched upon the cable, and when the new bridge is built, will be placed there.

It is estimated that the cost of this temporary construction will be in the neighborhood of $1750. This sum, under the proposed contract, will be borne by the water commission of West Linn, the contractor doing the work.

The new pipe which is to be used is 10 inches in diameter, and will replace the old 8 inch pipe which is now in use.

COUNTRY IS OPTIMISTIC SAYS BANKER

JOHN R. HUMPHRYS IS BACK FROM TRIP

Convention at Los Angeles is Attended; Condition of Finance Reviewed

A general feeling of optimism regarding the financial condition of the nation pervades the country generally according to John R. Humphrys, cashier of the Bank of Commerce who has just returned from Los Angeles where he attended the 47th annual convention of the American Banker's association.

"The corner on the road to normal conditions has been turned," said Mr. Humphrys. "The improvement will be gradual, but it is the opinion of the best financial brains of both this country and England that no release need be contemplated."

Exchange Held Important

One of the principle things which occupied the minds of the bankers, according to Mr. Humphrys, is the adjustment of foreign exchange and the equalization of the international money market. This hinges, he says, upon the proper handling of the export and import trade. The convention approved of the Ter Mullan Bond plan as the solution of the greatest difficulty now in the way of international credits. Under this system, the importers of foreign nations would get their governments to post bonds, guaranteeing payment for the merchandise being exported, and thus the exporters could levy against them in payment for their shipments. This would guarantee payment, and would alleviate conditions so that the importers would not have to pay in cash as they have been attempting to, but would be able to secure their imports on guaranteed credit. Ter Mullan is a Holland financier, and is the originator of the bonding proposals which bear his name.

Reserve Bank Lauded

As far as financial conditions are concerned within the United States, Mr. Humphrys says that the Federal Reserve Bank is deserving of much credit in the stabilizing of affairs. "The reserve bank," he says, "has functioned well, and all the prominent financial figures seem satisfied with its work." Interest rates to member banks are being gradually reduced, it was pointed out at the convention, and this will in turn have its effect upon the interest rates in domestic loans, which even now are showing a slight decrease. Indications, says Mr. Humphrys, point to the continued reduction of interest rates in forthcoming issues of treasury notes.

The convention was attended by between 3,000 and 4,000 bankers representing 24,000 banks with resources of more than $36,000,000,000.

The convention, at the closing session, passed resolutions favoring the repeal of the excess profits tax, and suggesting a sales tax as the most satisfactory method for raising the tremendous revenues for the support of governmental activities. The convention also voiced their disapproval of all legislative proposals tending to inject further government activities into business, and stated that many of the remedies proposed by congress to meet the present situation would do more harm than good through a disturbance of the normal operation of economic laws.

Economy Said Need

Economy in governmental expenditures was voiced in the resolutions adopted by the bankers. Unnecessary appropriations tending to increase the national debt were censured. The move toward a limitation of armament was endorsed for "humanitarian reasons in addition to its lessening of taxation." The convention also recommended that the bankers act in complete sympathy for any movement toward the increase of home building throughout the nation.

Also their resolutions were passed before the announcement of the pending railroad strike, the convention stated as the consensus of its belief that "the present high wages of railroad employes must be readjusted and shop and work agreements entered upon, as before the war period, must be revised."

Rail Strike Attacked

Mr. Humphrys believes that the pending railroad strike will have a tendency to throw a slight pessimism over business, but he does not believe that the depression will be more than a temporary condition or that it will have any lasting disastrous effects.

It was the general feeling Mr. Humphrys says, that confidence is being rapidly restored in financial America, an indication of which is contained in the fact that a steady gain in the par value of Liberty Bonds is being seen, not only in one or two, but in all issues.

Upon receipt of official word to the effect that Dr. J. P. Graham, of Portland had died from injuries received in the wreck of the booze car at New Era September 6, Judge J. U. Campbell dismissed the indictment against him.

Graham, with J. L. Smith and Morris Galbreath, was indicted by the grand jury on charges of transporting liquor. Smith later pled guilty and Galbreath was cleared. According to a statement signed by Smith, the late doctor was innocent of complicity in the affair.

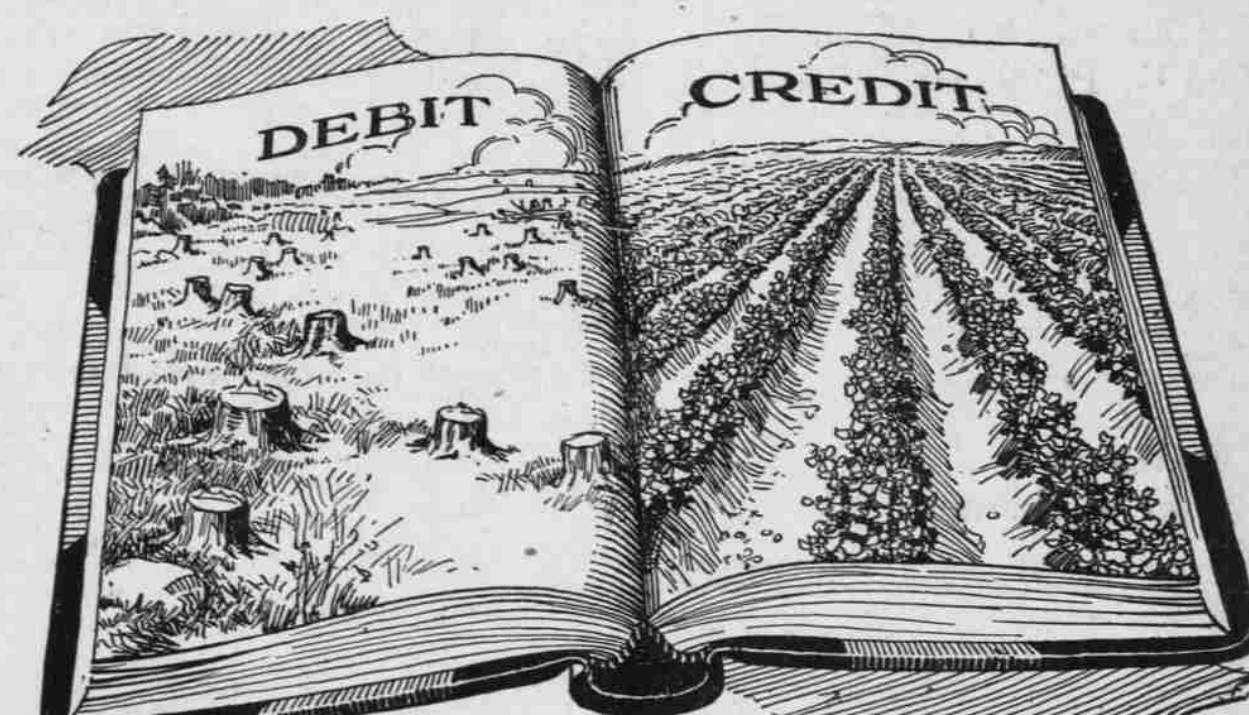

An indelible pencil on the non-business end of which is screwed a valve cap serves a doubly useful purpose. The pencil end is used for marking holes in tubes for later repair, while the valve cap is used as a valve wrench.

The Farmer Today Is a Business Man

HE does not run his farm in the haphazard fashion he did ten years ago. It's his business. He figures his costs and profits.

He knows, of course, what he gets out of the productive acres of his farm—and how much he is paying out in taxes on the idle unproductive stump and swamp land that brings in nothing.

That is Why He Is Clearing More Land Every Year
It's just good business. Every acre cleared and planted means more profit every year. The clearing cost is usually more than covered by the first crop.

More land is being cleared, too, because of the manufacture of dynamite made for this purpose, which makes the work easier, quicker and more economical.
