manufacturing conditions than is justi-tide of activity. An example of this misinterpreintion is as follows: During the war the year 914, there was scarcely an industry increased its capacity. A considerable percentage of them doubled and tripled their capacity. The increased capacity which they then created in order to meet the war-time demands, still exists. When it is stated, then, that a certain industry today is only working 60% of its capacity is should be kept in mind that this is 60% of its wartime capacity. It is using 60% of its pre-war facilities. This means that in comparison with its output prior to the war it is now running nearly normal. To iliustrate Elects Officials If a plant increased its capacity 50% during the war, its present capacity is 150% as compared with 100% in prewar years Therefore, if this plant today is running 60% capacity, it is running 60% of its present facilities which is equivalent to 90% per cent of its pre-war facilities; so that such a plant compared with pre-war days is really

Keeping It in the Family

Owing to the slack times in New York City a man keeping a small retail store was ferced to go out of business His brother-in-law is a member of the Prohibition forces cleaning up the big city. The merchant consulted with him on how he could make a living and what business he should go into On the Prohibition officer's advise the merchant became a boot-legger and former customers, who would not buy from him once upon a time, keep him busy day and night filling orders. Where does he get the goods to fill them with? Isn't that a foolish question when it was explicitly stated above that he went into the boot-legging game on his brother-in-law's advice and said brother-in-law belongs to the department enforcing prohibition.
