Water District Plan Meets With Approval

JENNINGS LODGE, Nov. 16.—At a mass meeting of the citizens of the Oak Grove, Concord and Jennings Lodge districts, which was held at Oak Grove on Wednesday evening of last week, those attending were unanimous in favoring the creation of a new water district, which will include the above named communities, and a special election will be held in the near future, possibly Feb. 1st.

Funds to finance the election to create the district and elect water commissioners will be raised as soon as the suit to dissolve the old Jennings Lodge district is completed.

The new district will be known as the Oak-Lodge Water district and will include the area from Island east, along Kellogg creek to Oatfield road, south to the north line of Gladstone, west to Fern Ridge, and thence to the Willamette river, being the west boundary of the district. It is estimated by those who are lending much time to the plan, that the district will have a valuation of about $1,200,000.

The following committee was named to name the commissioners and to take charge of the election fund, and are O. F. Dillman, H. G. Starkweather, Fred B. Madison, J. Dean Butler, C. G. Norris, Dave Palmblad and W. W. Thompson.

OREGON SCENERY LAUDED BY HEAD OF S.P. RAILROAD

VICE-PRESIDENT OF LINE STOPS HERE

McCormick Believes 1925 Exposition Will Mean Progress to State

"The Mammoth caves of Kentucky have nothing on Oregon," said E. C. McCormick, vice-president of the Southern Pacific who stopped for a short time in Oregon City enroute to San Francisco from Portland where he spent several days after attending the Pacific International Livestock Exposition.

Mr. McCormick, although a railroad man by profession, is a good judge of horse flesh, can tell whether the blue ribbons have been properly distributed among the milk producers and says the Berkshire hogs are the best mortgage raisers.

Incidentally Mr. McCormick is an artist. He does not paint pictures on canvas; he just sees them in his travels and has the happy faculty of description that makes one understand what he is talking about.

Exposition Favored

Mr. McCormick stated it is his firm conviction that the 1925 Exposition will establish the worth of Oregon through the exploitation of her natural resources. "I believe," he said, "that with the scenic assets you have here the Exposition can be staged without any artificial trappings."

"Within a radius of 100 miles of the little town of Grants Pass you have the ninth wonder of the world in the marble caves. All you have to do is to properly exploit them and these wonderful caves will leave a stream of gold in their wake. I doubt if the people living within driving distance of these caves realize their value. I have been in Grants Pass, Medford, and Ashland, many times, and when I have mentioned the marble caves the old settlers would nod their heads and let it go at that.

"Why even the Mammoth Caves of Kentucky, which Bard Taylor described as the eighth wonder of the western hemisphere, cannot compare with the marble caves of Southern Oregon, once their inner recesses are explored and made known to the traveling public.

Crater Lake Praised

"No need to stop at this scenic outdoors of nature. One has but to look around in Southern Oregon and get off the right of way to see nature in all its glory. The only place the public is acquainted with in the Far West is Crater Lake—a marvelous silent sea of indigo blue among canyons brim full of silence—yet, a few miles beyond is Diamond Lake, nestling like a precious jewel among the grey old trunks that speak of ages past and the silent work of God.

"I want to impress the importance of 'getting off the right of way' in the old Oregon Country to enjoy the fullness of nature. Between Medford and Crater Lake there are yet many undiscovered marvels that will make the blood of the American people tingle with delight once they are seen and understood.

"A side trip to Crater Lake should direct one to the Rogue River Gorge; thence to Klamath Lake hot springs, made famous by Pelican Bay and Hariman Lodge. Here is where one can find comfort in King Gray's skunk farm, and Williams River flowing into Klamath Lake. The best fishing in the world is to be found here. Ask John Scott; oh boy, there's big ones.

Pelican Bay is well named by a Scotch bard who once wrote: 'A gay old bird is the pelican; he holds in his bill his bell-can; he carries in his beak enough food for a week; I don't see how in-hell-he-can.' It is said Tom Lawson of frenzied finance fame was attracted to the Klamath Lake district by the size of the fish caught in Williams river and the stately grace of this grey old bird as it shuttles across from shore to shore.

Another point of interest is Hell Gate and the Devil's Playground. Hell Gate cuts through the Rogue river, a solid mass of granite with many rapids and banks of floral sandstone that have no equal anywhere in the world. Ice caves on the one side and hot springs on the other. In many places the openings are sufficiently large to permit one to drive an automobile into them. Snow-capped mountains add a perpetual glow in the sunlight, while in the valleys below are pastures green and vegetation in abundance. This district is known as the "bad lands of the Modocs."

"Paradise Alley is another point of interest in Southern Oregon. On my last visit there I saw grapes growing of the finest vintage, yielding 20 tons to the acre. Near Klamath Falls one gains the finest view of Mt Shasta that is to be had along the entire Cascade Range.

"The Savage Rapids irrigation district, six miles east of Grants Pass, is worthy of passing note. The first unit of this project was just completed under Governmental supervision and will bring into full use 12,000 acres of fertile land at a cost to the owners of $89.00 per acre, payable over a period of years. I doubt if the people of Oregon realize what is going on in their own state. This project is 492 feet long and the water is raised in a 42 inch pipe, a distance of 125 feet, by means of large turbines. There are 42 miles of canals and laterals. The Great Klamath Reclamation is an other worthy project in Southern Oregon, bringing into bearing several thousand acres of new farm land. I was astonished at the meager attention these projects receive while under construction. They are worthy of greater exploitation. A moving picture is as necessary to exploit the richness of the new land reclamation in the state as is given to the scenic charm of your wonderful Columbia River Highway.

Resources Need Exploitation

"I want to see the Exposition management issue a primer on the resources of Oregon, as they so richly deserve. This primer should be distributed broadcast. The railroads will help you in this respect. The children and school teachers need to know more of Oregon's opportunities, more of its history; more of the romance and adventure of the great Northwest. The American tourists flock to Europe for less attraction than is afforded in Oregon. The reason for this is the absence of better knowledge and the scarcity of accommodations. When one seeks to make a trip from some port along the Atlantic coast, he lands automatically on board a liner bound for Europe. This, because of the convenience afforded. He does not need to make half the preparation for a European trip as is necessary to come 'out there the West begins.' Everything required from a tooth brush to a hot bath is provided on the modern liner. Those unacquainted with what the West holds, still fancy it is necessary to carry a six-shooter to insure his safety while traveling beyond the Rocky mountains.

New Day Dawning

"I can see the dawning of a new day for the West. Your Exposition in 1925 will have a stimulating effect upon the traveling public. The transcontinental railroads will go their part in exploiting the date and the advantages to the traveler, by means of their tremendous distribution system for literature. The railroads come in direct touch with the people in the thickly populated centers. Reduced rates, improved highways, convenient hotel accommodations, courteous treatment, a brilliant objective, all combined will place Oregon as the Northwest in the path of travel. It will place Oregon 25 years ahead over its normal growth and leave a wholesome atmosphere and a better understanding among us all.

New Water System At Molalla Finished

Water, that analyzes as pure as the famous Bull Run, was turned into the new Molalla system from Trout Creek at seven o'clock Tuesday night, according to W. W. Everhart, of Molalla, who was in Oregon City Wednesday.

The new water system was built at a cost of $38,000, involves seven and three quarters miles of pipeline and has a capacity of 380,000 gallons in 24 hours.

Work on the water system was started by contractor V. R. Dennis of McMinnville on September 15. Its completion required two months to the day. The old system, getting supply from a spring near Molalla will become a reserve. This system was built by Mr. Dennis several years ago.

In order to finance the water works, Molalla voted $40,000 in bonds. A six-inch pipe conveys the water to a receiving tank situated on a one acre tract on the O. W. Robbins ranch two miles east of the city. This ground is owned by the city and it is planned to erect a large reservoir there in the future. The old reservoir has a capacity of 75,000 gallons. The normal consumption of the city is 46,000 gallons a day.

The new pipe line runs for the greater part of the seven miles through a prairie country where the ditch was made by the use of tractors and plows. Canyons, which necessitated considerable rock work, were encountered for some two miles, and just east of the city the line is sunk below the bed of the Molalla river.
