Storm Does Little Damage at Estacada

ESTACADA, Nov. 24.—Estacada and vicinity was more fortunate than Portland and Oregon City in the recent storm. While there was a great abundance of rain, and considerable wind, yet the air was balmy and springlike. The streets on Sunday were covered with water and it was difficult to get around without rubber boots, but by continued effort the water was finally run off. The hotel, Cary's real estate office and other places were nearly surrounded by water and the Estacada and Cascade garages were flooded a foot deep. The Clackamas river here is swollen and while very high, has done no particular damage. Trains were delayed on account of the track being washed out near Jennings but at this writing (Wednesday) all trains are again running on time.

We have heard of no serious damage to country roads. Trucks from the mills even continued their work during the worst of the storm.

Prof. R. H. Dearborn, head of the department of electrical engineering of the O. A. C., was in Estacada Tuesday accompanied by twenty O. A. C. students from his department. They had been at Cazadero to inspect the P. R. L. & P. Co.'s power plant and later went down to River Mill to look that plant over.

The Board of Health has ordered that all water for drinking purposes be boiled, the precaution being necessary on account of so much surface water at present.

MORE ROADS

On December 30, the taxpayers of Clackamas county will decide whether or not the road building program, as financed through special taxation, is to continue. According to the estimated budgets prepared for the fifty-one road districts in the county, a total of a quarter of a million dollars is needed for the upkeep and the improvement of the side roads and major arteries that do not fall directly under state control.

At first thought a quarter of a million strikes the taxpayers as a lot of money. It is. But those who vote the tax will get more than a quarter of a million's worth of return. With automotive transportation increasing by leaps and bounds, good roads mean higher valuation of the property throughout the county. With a great World Exposition practically assured, the county must get its house in order to create the best possible impression to the millions of visitors who will come to the state in 1925. This means that the roads must be good, for the tourist who comes to the fair will come in an automobile, and it must be remembered that the investment horse-power of a Flivver is often as great as that of a high-powered car that is a liability to the owner's bank account. But they both need good roads.

Wisely expended, a quarter of a million should get its worth in highways, and a far greater return through its benefit to the county.

Nowhere in the state have the farmers been more loyal to road building programs than in Clackamas county. In no county has money been more willingly expended. And from all indications the taxpayers of fifty-one road districts will not halt the progress of the highways.

Past results prove road taxes an investment. No one but a chronic grouch or a lunatic regrets the tremendous sums expended on the Pacific Highway, a road to which progressive men point today with pride.

Enter The Plate Glass Kitchen

Newest Culinary Idea Ousts Old Appliances

Plate glass in the kitchen! Not cut glass but plate glass, the same sort that the housewife of today uses to protect her dining room table, her bureaus and other fine pieces of furniture!

When Friend Husband started to use plate glass on his desk in the office, his wife was quick to apply the idea in her drawing room, dining room and bed rooms. Now she has gone a step further—and lo, the plate glass kitchen.

First she put plate glass on the kitchen table—and out went the oil cloth cover. Then she put up a plate glass shelf or two, and the old wooden ones that were so hard to keep clean landed on the kindling pile. Next came a glass cover for the top of the refrigerator. She tried mixing dough on the new table top and promptly discarded the old wooden mixing board, for she found that she did not have to sprinkle flour to keep the dough from sticking. And one sweep of the damp cloth removed all traces of her work.

But she did not use hot liquid plate glass stove-top, even though it would make it so easy to see how she was burning.
