Enraged Father Shoots Son and Takes Own Life

Family Dispute Causes Fit; Much Building at No Inquest to be Held Says Coroner

There is no doubt that Frank F. Bingham, of Milwaukie died Sunday morning from self-inflicted wounds, and it is practically established that son, Ellis S. Bingham was shot by his father, according to the report of Coroner O. A. Pace after an investigation 'made Monday. No, inquest will be held, and investigations are practically completed.

Ellis Bingham, who is in the hospital at Sellwood, suffering from wounds in the back, is expected to remade by attendants to the coroner Monday. The shot gun shell, which was fired by the elder Bingham in a fit of anger, was loaded with 732 shot, which is a standard trap load, and & Steel Co. have three others under very fine. MOVE IS NOT APPROVED The tragedy occurred when the sunger Binghams started to move on the Milwaukie none. The elder man and his son had been grarreling constantly since they moved to Milwankie over a year age, and the younger man and his wife rented .. aome in Portlan . Frank Bingham objected to the move and in a fit of ege took a shot gir and fired at Emma Bingham, missing ner. Her ausband Ellis rushed up and attempt ed to take the gun from his father and in the melee was shot in the back After he had been shot, he grappled with the older man and took the gun from him. Running out into the vard. he collapsed, and neighbors who gave him attention forgot the older man, who secured the gun, went into the kitchen of the house, fired at himself twice without success, then put the butt of the gun on the floor, put his forchead to the muzzle, and pushed the trigger with a broomstick.

Death was instantaneous. "It became almost impossible for us to live in the same house with Fills' father and we decided to move and had rented a home in Portland.

declared Mrs. Bingham. "We had stared to move and the old man became very angry. He did not want us to leave him. I quarreled with him and he took the shotgun and fired at me. He did not hit me

Wind Storm Damage Heavy Around Sandy

SANDY, Dec. 5.-The wind storm last week was the worst out here for a long time. Trees fell dangerously near several people passing along on the roads and four trees blocked the road from the Pizola' place to Lohrmann's. R. Kaiser, Sandy cream hauler had to leave his team at Lohrmann's and walk home. A large tree fell across John Mitchell's chicken house and killed two dozen of his fancy Leghorn hens. A limb fell among a bunch of Sandy school children but did not happen to hurt any one. A heavy rain accompanied most of the storm which lasted over two hours and put out the electric lights and broke down the telephone lines in every direction. The Sandy river was almost as high again last week as when the approach went out on the pipe-line bridge. This bridge was so badly damaged that a new structure was considered. The water washed in under the timbers. the leadership of Harry Gorshine.
