A. R. Nichols, supervisor of state trade and industrial education work, whose home is at Corvallis, Oregon was in Oregon City Wednesday, having come here at the request of the carpenters' union to organize a class for carpenters, when special courses are to be offered for apprentices in this trade

Mr. Nichols has arranged with J L. Gary, superintendent of the Union high school at West Linn, so that classes may be formed and to carry on their work at the high schoo build-

These courses are ofered by the deparament of trade and industry of the Oregon State Board for vocational education. The state board for the vocational education will pay half the salary of the instructor, and the men who take this course will be expected to pay the other half. In this way the expenses for instruction willvary from twenty-five to fifty cents per lesson, depending upon the number of men taking the course. From indications the class will be formed with a large membership. This is open to non-union men as well as union.

Mr. Nichols also visited among some of his old time friends while in this city. Among these was City Superintendent R. W. Kirk, of the Oregon City high schools,

If the problem could be entirely eliminated there would be no further need of enforcement. However, this report is submitted for the purpose only of showing the activities of the state officers in the one line of work. Through the efforts of the state traffic officers in demonstrating the work of loadometers throughout the differcommunities, eight counties have pur chased these machines and, while the purchases were made late in the season and as far as known but two counties have been able to place their machines in operation up to the ent time, it can reasonably be expected that the work during the coming season will be as effective as could possibly be anticipated."
