As the situation stands, it leaves the state highway commission holding the sack, for the state body has already advanced and spent most of the money which Multnomah county was to contribute. The matter will undoubtedly come up for consideration at the next meeting of the state high way commission, which is scheduled for next week. The estimated cost of the Mount Hood loop from the Multnomah line, through Clackamas county to Zigwag, where the forest road starts, was $610,000. The highway commission offered to match all moneys contributed by Clackamas and Multnomah counties for the loop road. Clacka-

W . M. (Pike) Davis reminded the commission that Multnomah county is morally bound to keep its agreement with the highway commission and "as men of honor" the obligation could not be disregarded. George Joseph declared that the people of Multnomah are willing to have this money spent in Clackamas county, knowing that Clackamas county cannot afford to build the road and that when completed the loop will be of greater benefit to Multnomah county and to Portland than it will be to Clackamas. Mr. Joseph also directed the attention of the tax supervisors that there has been passed a specific law which enables Multnomah county to spend its money outside the county limits and that this law was passed with the express object in view of enabling Multnomah county to aid Clackamas county in the building of the loop road.
