Gribble Plans For Exhibits At Fairs

CANBY, Jan. 11.—A. D. Gribble, prominent Jersey breeder, whose farm is located at Gribble Prairie, about four miles east of Canby, was in this city Tuesday afternoon, on his way home from Portland, where he had been on business.

Mr. Gribble, who contemplated retiring from the breeding business a number of years ago, disposing of his herd of fine registered Jersey cattle, has again started into the business, since there was such a demand for his stock at the recent International Livestock show in Portland, and succeeded in getting back several of his cows sold at a sale three years ago, this being held in Beaver Creek, Clackamas county.

"I will never part with these cows again for a long time," says Mr. Gribble, but expects to raise others from this fine stock, and is already planning to enter Jerseys at the next county fair to be held at Canby, and is also contemplating to enter some of his stock for show purposes at the 1922 International Livestock Show in Portland.

For the past fifteen years Mr. Gribble has entered Jerseys and other stock at the Clackamas county fair, from the first year, held at Gladstone, until the 1921 fair. His herd of Jerseys has always been a source of attention at the fair grounds.

Henry Yeary Killed By Insane Patient

CANBY, Jan. 10.—Henry Yeary, 63, of Canby, an attendant at the state hospital for the insane, was almost instantly killed by F. F. Gerber, a patient, in an unprovoked attack at 9 o'clock this morning.

Yeary, who was on an attendant at the hospital since October 1, was directing the work of a crew of patients on the hospital lawn near the main building when he was suddenly attacked by Gerber, who struck him on the top of the head and at the base of the skull with a shovel, fracturing his head. Yeary was attacked from behind and had no chance to defend himself. He died in 30 minutes.

MAN NOT HARMLESS

Gerber was committed to the state hospital from Multnomah county April 5, 1910, and has been a trusty at the institution for several years. He was always regarded as harmless and hospital authorities are unable to account for his attack upon Yeary. He has neither relatives nor friends, so far as the records of the hospital show.

Yeary came to Canby about three years ago with his wife and children from Oklahoma, and has since made this city his home. He was 63 years of age.

Deceased is survived by his wife, Mrs. Agnes Yeary, of Canby, and the following children: William Yeary, employed by the Southern Pacific Railroad company, operating between

That the Oregon City high school will develop a speedy basketball team was the indication of their first pre-season game with the Willamette Independents Wednesday night. The game, resulting in a 11 to 6 score with the locals on the heavy end, was played at the O. C. H. S. gym.

Oregon City lead the tally from the beginning. Considering the fact that it is the first time they have played together in a real contest, their team work was good. The game was comparatively fast, though the locals had the chance to gain in speed because of the heavier weight of their opponents.

Sheriff Wilson Is Found Not Guilty

Sheriff W. J. Wilson was found not guilty by the circuit court jury at the conclusion of his two-day trial Thursday afternoon. The jury retired at 3:34 p. m., and took 17 minutes to return a verdict. Wilson, who was charged on indictment from the grand jury, of larceny by bailer, Judge George W. Stapleton of Portland, sat on the case.

Testimony of the state's star witness in the trial of Sheriff W. J. Wilson for larceny, was practically impeached by the prosecution's own witnesses on both direct and cross examination.

The case against the sheriff of Clackamas county, charging him with larceny by bailer, opened Wednesday morning with Judge G. W. Stapleton of Portland, presiding at the request of Judge J. U. Campbell of the local court. H. E. Meads, game warden for this district and former deputy sheriff under Wilson gave the opening testimony, tending to show that tools in a car stolen from C. E. Moulton, Portland plumber, came into Wilson's possession and that the sheriff refused to turn them over to the owner, saying that there "weren't any."

According to Mead's statement, Moulton's car was found near Oswego March 4, 1920 and brought to Oregon City. The same night, he stated, he, Sheriff Wilson and County Assessor W. B. Cooke, at the Sheriff's request, put the tools into the court house. This it was alleged was the last seen of them.

ACT IS DENIED

Later, on the stand, Cooke stated that he had not aided in the removal of the tools, and had seen one pipe fitter that he could remember. Cooke was called by the state and District Attorney Stipp intimated that from testimony on the stand, the assessor had not given an entire account of the matter when called before the grand jury. The defense recalled the positive statements of Meads that Cooke had aided in taking the tools from the car.

Meads testimony was to the effect that after the sheriff told him that the tools were not in the car, he and driver went to Portland, leaving about 9:30 a. m.

C. H. Elston, deputy sheriff of Oswego, stated that he had seen the car in Oregon City after the noon hour and that there were tools in the tonneau answering the general description of those alleged taken by the sheriff. The statement was made upon his being called by the defense after his testimony as a state witness. Sheriff George Alexander of Washington county testified that he had seen the car in Oregon City with tools in it, after the time that, according to Meads, it had been taken to Portland.

MOULTON TESTIFIES

Moulton, owner of the machine, called for the state, was not positive of the hour, but stated definitely that he had left before noon. On cross examination he stated that he had no personal marks on the tools which to identify them.

The state rested its case at 3:46 p. m. Defense immediately moved for dismissal upon the ground that no evidence had been introduced to show that the tools found in the stolen car were Moulton's and further that there was no evidence to prove that Wilson took them; other than that they might have been placed in a position where he could have taken them. In overruling the motion for dismissal, Judge Stapleton held that the circumstantial evidence regarding the identity of the tools was sufficient to warrant submission to the jury, but warned the state that its case was weak in that little proof was given to the effect that Wilson had taken the tools, or ever had had them in his possession personally.

Later, on the stand, Cooke stated that he had not aided in the removal of the tools, and had seen one pipe fitter that he could remember. Cooke was called by the state and District Attorney Stipp intimated that from testimony on the stand, the assessor had not given an entire account of the matter when called before the grand jury. The defense recalled the positive statements of Meads that Cooke had aided in taking the tools from the car.

Meads testimony was to the effect that after the sheriff told him that the tools were not in the car, he and driver went to Portland, leaving about 9:30 a. m.

C. H. Elston, deputy sheriff of Oswego, stated that he had seen the car in Oregon City after the noon hour and that there were tools in the tonneau answering the general description of those alleged taken by the sheriff. The statement was made upon his being called by the defense after his testimony as a state witness. Sheriff George Alexander of Washington county testified that he had seen the car in Oregon City with tools in it, after the time that, according to Meads, it had been taken to Portland.

MOULTON TESTIFIES

Moulton, owner of the machine, called for the state, was not positive of the hour, but stated definitely that he had left before noon. On cross examination he stated that he had no personal marks on the tools which to identify them.

The state rested its case at 3:46 p. m. Defense immediately moved for dismissal upon the ground that no evidence had been introduced to show that the tools found in the stolen car were Moulton's and further that there was no evidence to prove that Wilson took them; other than that they might have been placed in a position where he could have taken them. In overruling the motion for dismissal, Judge Stapleton held that the circumstantial evidence regarding the identity of the tools was sufficient to warrant submission to the jury, but warned the state that its case was weak in that little proof was given to the effect that Wilson had taken the tools, or ever had had them in his possession personally.
