COMMISSION TO HANDLE BOXING IS PLANNED HERE

Appointment of a boxing commission to establish a regular series of bouts in Oregon City and to promote fights with local leather pushers, is projected in a petition being circulated for presentation to the City Council.

The petition, which was placed in circulation here Saturday, had 43 names by evening, including many of the prominent business men. It is expected that it will be presented to the city council at their coming special session April 18.

If sufficient local business men favor the establishment of a commission to handle boxing, the commission will recommend to the council that the appointment be made. Those sponsoring the petition as yet refuse to make their names known, but expect to disclose their identity as soon as a decision is reached upon who will be recommended for the commission.

The plan is to promote matches with local men as much as possible, though it is probable that outside talent will be imported to battle with some of the milt artists here who are rated somewhat above the average amateur run.

Woolen Mill Strike—Shortly after 8 o'clock Friday morning some 43 weavers at the Oregon City Woolen Mills left their looms and demanded the removal of their foreman, Arthur Haigh, who, they said, was obnoxious to them, Saturday they were joined by the hands of the carding department and which by finishing room, in fact every department was vacated except the spinning room. The spinners went out Monday. The five or six weavers, who remained at their looms when the agreement not to work, and every part of the mill was idle. There were about 230 employes on the strike.

It appeared that there had been growing dislike to the foreman for some time. The weavers said he was prone to credit them on the books from which the payroll is made up with less work than is shown on the tags he attaches to the goods, turned out from the looms. Whenever this was detected it was corrected, but the weavers who are paid by the yard, think that such errors are made too often. They also allege that the foreman often used ungentlemanly and sometimes insulting language to the recently made co-defendant in an adultery case considerably increased the dislike among the weavers, and it did not require much to move them to action.

An arbitration board was appointed and found that Haigh was guilty of these charges and suggested he resign the position as foreman to take effect sixty days so as to enable the company to secure a man in his place. On Tuesday the whistles blew at the usual hour and work was resumed in all departments. The strikers included some of the best citizens of this city. All were well behaved and seemed disposed to be fair, and it is probably due to this spirit that a conclusion so favorable to the strikers was reached.

The arbitration board consisted of Fred Metzner, Charles Rose, John Thomas, James Wilkinson, Arthur Dieder, This committee chose W. W. Myers, G. H. Miller and John Shade to represent them. On the part of the factory T. W. Sullivan, H. C. Stevens and J. H. Burghardt were selected. The committee met in the Fountain Hose Company's headquarters, where a number of witnesses were brought in. 44 YEARS AGO Taken from the Oregon City Enterprise April 4, 1868.

Closing Week—The present term of the Oregon City seminary closes next Friday.

Painful Accident—On Last Wednesday afternoon, John Delaney, late of Ontario, was suddenly killed near this city, where he was employed getting out logs for the Portland mills. He was accompanied by a young man, son of O. M. Hineson, and was in the act of fastening a chain to a heavy log, when the cattle attached to the chain suddenly started up, and the man was caught between two logs. The lad, seeing the position of his companion, quickly started the log away, releasing Delaney, but the injuries proved fatal. Dr. Barclay was sent for and arrived upon the ground within 30 minutes after the accident occurred, but all medical aid was unavailing, and the injured man died within a short time. The deceased leaves a brother here. He was about 35 years of age. He came to this community recently. The remains were interred in the Oregon City cemetery.
