Oregon City Man Tells of Wreck Near Shanghai

How the Eastern Sailor rammed and sunk the Sakaki Maru, and the story of the explosion aboard which killed four and injured nearly a score of others, is told by Oren Moore of Oregon City, second engineer on the Columbia-Pacific steamer.

"We were coming up the river toward Shanghai on the morning of March 22," he writes from Shanghai to his brother Byron of Oregon City. "The weather was quite foggy and we had several narrow escapes from hitting some big Chinese junks so the pilot anchored till the fog lifted and then we proceeded on up the river. It seemed the stream was full of junks that morning and we were having an awful time."

"We swung away around one and were way over on our side of the channel when the Sakaki Maru hove in sight. We signaled to pass on the port side, a junk being in her way, she signaled to pass on the starboard. We saw we could not do it and we answered back to go to port. She whistled again to go to starboard so we whistled three times meaning we were going asternship out of control."

"The Sakaki Maru was going at a good clip and kept right on coming and when she crossed our bow we smashed her a good one amid ships. It cavied in her side and crashed in our bow so we are three feet shorter than we were. She sank in only five minutes, her engine room fire room and forward hold filled with water. The river where we hit is shallow so she did not have far to sink and no lives were lost."

"We are now in drydock getting fixed up at a cost of $15,000. We are getting 20 new planes and a new bow stem and will be ready to sail the 15th for Faki Bar and Darien, home."

"We also had a bad explosion five days ago when a bunch of gas formed in the fore peak tank and was set on fire by a burner who was burning some rivets. There were 16 men working there at the time. The first man got half way out of the hole and they were all graining hold of him so neither he nor anyone else could get out. The heat and smoke soon put them all to sleep and we went below, putting wet clothes over our mouths and noses. We tied a rope around the first man and pulled him up. The black smoke was so thick that we could not see. The fire department arrived at that time and the men put on gas masks and went way down. They tied ropes onto them and we pulled them out one at a time."

"Man Are Burned" "I never saw any men so burned up in all my life. Only one was dead when we got them all out but three died later. Some had no skin on them at all. We had no doctor so the officers had to give first aid. I made some doctor. All we could do was to cut off their clothes and pour vitric acid on them and wrap them in sheets. We used some old doors and ladders for stretchers. One man's leg was burned to a crisp but he was still alive."

"Nothing much has happened since. I fractured my little finger on my left hand. I was using a hammer, and I chiseled. I missed the chisel, and you can guess the rest."

Moore was making his fourth trip on the Eastern Sallor, which touched Vladivostok, Shanghai, Hong Kong and Darien. The steamer cleared from Portland February 14.

PLAN FOR BOXING COMMISSION HIT FATAL WALLOP

Remonstrance Scores K. O. at Council Meeting; Mayor Hands Jolt to Proposed Pugilistic Organization.

WATER SERVICE FOR GLADSTONE TALKED

Investigation of Extension of Mains to North Started by City; Report Ordered.

The petition for the establishment of a boxing commission in Oregon City, was handed a solar plexus by the city council at its session on Wednesday evening. Opposed by a remonstrance containing three times as many names as the original document, it was given the K. O. through an executive order of Mayor James Shannon.

The original petition, containing 116 names was presented. Councilman Bridges moved to hold it over for full consideration and investigation at the hands of the council. Van Aukun objected, stating that action should be taken at once, and the matter settled. "It's settled now," stated hizzoner, after viewing the remonstrance with 332 names attached. "The majority rules! Next order of business!"

The question of giving water service to Gladstone and the adjacent districts was fully discussed. A committee from Gladstone headed by O. E. Freytag, appeared before the council, requesting a full investigation into the possibilities of granting service to that community. Councilman Metzner moved for the appointment of a committee to investigate in conjunction with the water board. "I think there could be water enough if the dam were raised about two feet," Metzner stated, quoting former incidents where more water had been secured by temporarily raising the dam. "If we want to fix up the dam and the pipe line there will be plenty of water," he said.

Water Supply Queried. William Howell, a member of the water board, took issue with the fact that there was enough water. He pointed out that the supply was at present taxed to capacity by Oregon City alone. "It is only a matter of time until lots of money will be needed at the headworks to replace the wood pipe and wooden dam," he said. "A concrete dam and new pipe will be needed in five or six years."

Chris Scheubel made the statement that when the system was installed it was understood that the way it was operated did not produce a capacity supply, and that slight alterations at the headworks would increase the flow one-third.

Councilman F. H. Cross pointed out the fact that very little consideration had ever been given the Gladstone petitioners and he urged a complete investigation. "Gladstone, Canemah, and the cities around here are as much a part of Oregon City as this city itself," he said. "One of the best ways to build up Oregon City is to help the surrounding districts, and I think that we should do anything we can to aid them. If the water extension is in any way feasible, I believe that it should get full consideration from this council."

Oak Lodge Has Plan. W. W. Woodbeck of Jennings Lodge pointed out the plans which were being laid for a water system in the Oak Lodge district to the north of Gladstone. These people had also asked for water from Oregon City, he said. "If the engineers estimates are correct, said Mr. Woodbeck, "in a few years a new system will have to be installed and it would be a good stroke of enterprise for Oregon City to get these outside districts to aid in paying the improvements." He pointed out that Gladstone has 330 water users and the Oak Lodge district, 300, and with the increase in population in another five years there would be fully 2,000 new consumers available, all of whom could be secured by Oregon City.

The mayor appointed the fire and water and street committees to investigate the matter in company with the water board. May 20 was set by the council as the date for hearing any objections to the acceptance of the paving on Sixth street, which has been completed.

Vehicle Ordinance Passed. The new vehicle ordinance, to replace the one recently held unconstitutional by Judge J. U. Campbell was passed. The same license fee of $120 a year for all trucks delivering articles here for resale, was provided. Farmers are exempted under the provisions of the new law.

A petition from residents of Hood View in Holmes addition, south of Division street and east of Molalla avenue, for a sewer was referred to the city attorney and engineer. Engineer J. R. Stafford reported that conditions had been investigated and a sewerage system was badly needed and could be arranged if the legal procedure necessary could be outlined.

A petition for the vacation of the alley running east and west in Block 46 of the County Edition to Oregon City was presented, and filed for action after the legal period of 40 days has elapsed. City Attorney O. D. Eby, reporting on the request for the vacation of the alley in Block 112, advised the property owners to file their own petition.

A petition from the Clackamas county public health association for a donation of $100 to aid the staging of a public health institute here, was referred to the finance committee. The institute is to be held May 18 to 20.

The report of the chief of police for the month of April showed 77 arrests, and an equal number of hoboes lodged over night. One arrest was made for the immigration department. Fines totaled $330.
